W. M. S. DISTRICT CONVENTION

The Woman's Missionary Society of Napanee District (Tamworth Division) met in annual convention on Friday, Oct. 17th, in the Methodist Church, Enterprise.

The district was well represented by large delegations of earnest Auxiliaries, Circle and Band workers, and an inspiring convention was the result.

The morning session was opened with devotional exercises, conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland.

Mrs. J. A. Wartman presided and Mrs. E. J. Wagar was appointed Press Reporter, with Miss Hattie Wagar as assistant.

A cordial welcome was extended to the delegates and visitors by Mr. S. D. Wagar, an honorary member, in behalf of the Local Auxiliary.

The greatest interest and attention was shown as the delegates responded to the Roll Call.

Ten Auxiliaries, three Circles, six Bands, and one Girls' Swastika Club reported a total annual membership of 719 and 75 life members, with an income since May of $309.85.

There are ninety-eight Outlooks, twenty-eight Annual Reports, thirty monthly letters, and thirty-two Palm Branches, taken in the District.

The books of study "China's New Day" and "The King's Business" are used in all Auxiliaries, as well as the suggested programs.

Through all the reports there was not one discouraging note, but increased interest and zeal in the work in every instance.

The Swastika Club, above referred to, is an unique feature in Band work. In reality it is a "Mission Study" or Training Class under the guidance of the Mission Band Superintendents and is composed of seven members, young girls from fifteen to eighteen years.

They are a committee to see that the Enterprise Mission Band, to which they belong, is a success in training, in membership and in attendance, and to aid the superintendents in any and every way they can. Their meetings are conducted along the lines of the Circle, in mission study, sewing, etc. They are considered capable of leading a Band, Circle or even an Auxiliary meeting if necessary.

In appreciation of their services the Enterprise Band presented four of these girls, the Misses Martha Wagar, Florence Walker, Carlotta Covert and Marion Wagar, with life membership in the Band and little Constance Wagar was made a life member by her father. The presentation of Life Certificates was made by Mrs. Bateman, of Kingston, a former beloved organizer, who addressed the girls in loving words, which will go with them all through their lives.

Mrs. Grange requested that the report of the Swastika Club be sent to the Outlook as any new methods for advancing the work were always welcome.

In her report as Organizer, Mrs. Wartman showed a year of great Certificates were made by Mrs. Bateman of Kingston, a former beloved organizer, who addressed the girls in loving words, which will go with them all through their lives.

Mrs. Grange requested that the report of the Swastika Club be sent to the Outlook as any new methods for advancing the work were always welcome.

In her report as Organizer, Mrs. Wartman showed a year of great activity. She knew the exact condition of every Society in her large district, showing that she had been in close touch with every Department of her work.

There are very few churches in the district without an Auxiliary, and only three Auxiliaries having no Circle or Band.

One new Band was reported at Canden East, organized in June last, and doing good work. Other Bands and Circles are in a hopeful stage for early organization.

Mrs. Wartman emphasized her report by the use of a beautifully prepared chart, which gave much useful information.

The program was excellent throughout. The papers, which covered nearly every difficult problem in Auxiliary, Circle and Band work, were of a high order and thoroughly enjoyed.

The first paper was read by Miss Jessie Patterson, Moscow, and should be an inspiration to every Circle member. It was a synopsis of one prepared by Miss Gardner, of Albert College, entitled "The Mission Circle, its aim and purpose."

"The Mission Circle" she said, is a daughter of the W.M.S., and a grown up sister of the Mission Band. It was provided by wise mothers to direct the enlarged sympathies, to broaden the lives and to exercise the talents of the young women of our church, that they may take their part in the work by which the world is to be conquered for Christ.

The Mission Circle leads girls to deeper consecration, to make all their busy plans accord with God's will. It is in the Mission Circle that girls receive the message from God that helps them in regions beyond as nurses, doctors, teachers and evangelists.

An efficient Circle must have an efficient set of officers, who are wide awake to their responsibilities, duties and privileges. A superintendent of proportionate and systematic giving, holds one of the most important offices which must be managed tactfully and prayerfully.

Circle programs should be prepared at least a month ahead and if possible an outline for the whole year's work arranged.

Programme's should be wholly "Missionary," and two things always kept in mind when arranging them, 1st, "Individual responsibility," and secondly, "Missionary information."

Every member should have something to do, and as many as possible take part in each meeting.

Keep up the Watch Tower, provide good music, have a missionary library, work for a definite aim and your circle will be a success.

The Mission Circle is the W. M. S. training school. No other society can replace it. It is exclusively for young women. It prepares them for the Auxiliary work their mother's must one day lay down." The paper closed with a plea that our young women will respond loyally to the call, and that this year may be marked by a large increase of Mission Circles in the Bay of Quinte Branch.

Mrs. Bateman led the opening devotional exercises of the afternoon, assisted by Mrs. Geo. Wartman, of Wesley.

The minutes of the morning session were read and confirmed.

UNION EVANGELISTIC SERVICES.

Interest Increasing Nightly, Large Numbers Entering Upon a Christian Life, a Splendid Choir Renders Inspiring Music.

The evangelistic services continue to draw large congregations, eager to hear the old gospel that is ever new. The congregations last Sunday were the largest since the opening of the campaign. Grace church was literally packed at the evening service. On Sunday afternoon a large congregation of men and women listened to Mr. Crossley on the topic, "Mind your own business." On Monday evening the evangelist spoke and sang sweetly on the subject of "Heaven." On Tuesday evening the vitally important subject of "Conversion" was ably dealt with and many difficulties were cleared away. "False views of Hell" was the topic on Wednesday evening and on Thursday evening, "Helps and hindrances to saving faith." This (Friday) evening the service will be of special interest to young men and women. On Sunday there will be two union services. In the morning the two congregations will unite in Grace church and in the evening in Trinity. No service in Trinity in the morning nor in Grace in the evening. Mr. Crossley will speak to each of the Sunday schools after the morning service. The services will close on Tuesday evening of next week. Come and enjoy the closing services of this wonderful evangelistic campaign. All are welcome.

THE HISTORICAL MEETING.

Last Friday evening, October 24th, the Lennox and Addington Historical Society held its first meeting for the new season with Prof. Herbert T. J. Coleman, Dean of the Faculty of Education at Queen's University, Kingston, as the Lecturer.

The President of the Society called the meeting to order and before introducing Prof. Coleman mentioned briefly some of the additions to the collection since the meeting last May.

The most important of these were:

A set of weights and measures used by the Inspector of fifty years ago, the late Thomas H. Waller, Esq. These were presented by his son, Mr. Wm. T. Waller.

A signed photograph from Dr. James Bryce, the distinguished British diplomatist and scholar and the late British Ambassador to the United States.

A valuable and almost complete set of Minutes of the County of Lennox and Addington and of the Township Council of North Fredericksburg, presented by Mr. Willet Dollar.

A bronze medal to commemorate the brave deed of Laura Secord at Beaver Dam, June 24th, 1813, presented by Mr. J. H. Smith, Hamilton, Ont.

Large medal commemorating the Quebec Tercentenary Celebration of the Founding of Quebec by Champlain, presented by the National Battlefields Commission.

A number of early Ontario and Canadian Directories and early Canadian books together with a large number of original documents and papers dealing with affairs in this district. These were presented by Mr. John H. Stevenson of Ottawa, and make the fifth contribution that the Society has had from Mr. Stevenson. First police force badges used in Napanee, presented by Mr. Alfred Kent.

Crown deed of 300 acres in Richmond Township, dated 1805. This land is part of the original townsite of Napanee. The deed is presented by Dr. R. C. Cartwright.

A bear skin Busby as worn by the Napanee Battery Garrison Artillery under command of Captain Edmund Hooper, in 1806, presented by Mr. John M. Wallace.

Since the last meeting of the Society there have been 48 separate donations to the collection, including in the neighborhood of two thousand separate documents, papers, pamphlets, volumes, newspapers and articles of interest to an historical museum.

After describing the work which had been done during the summer months the President referred to the annual meeting of the Ontario Historical Society held at Chatham in Sept and to the many kind references made by the delegates at that time to the hospitality of the people of Napanee during the annual meeting held here the year before. He announced that the next annual meeting of the parent organization would be held in Ottawa in either May or June, 1914, with headquarters in the Chateau Laurier.

Prof. Coleman was then introduced and gave a lecture on "The Meaning and the Value of the Study of History." Starting with a few remarks with regard to the appropriateness of an address of this kind being used to open a season's course of Historical lectures, Prof. Coleman told how the Study of History as a modern science originated. He explained what history is and by reference to the great historians and their work showed very clearly how they were able to produce readable history from the records of the past ages. He gave four definitions of history as it is understood by four distinguished scholars and then carefully showed how great men could have such varied ideas on the question. His stories to illustrate these definitions were most appropriate. Prof. Coleman concluded his lecture with a few very complimentary remarks about Mr. Herdington's History of the County and the good influence such a book will have and with a strong plea for the intelligent study of history in our schools. The lecturer when here before established a very high standard but he easily maintained his previous excellent record on this visit to Napanee. It is unfortunate that the very stormy evening made the attendance small.

In his closing remarks the President of the Society thanked Prof. Coleman for coming again to Napanee and for delivering such an able lecture.

The next meeting of the Society was announced for Friday evening, November 28th, when Mr. Justice Riddell of Toronto, will give a lecture on "An American Soldier's Experiences in the War of 1812."

The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

PURITY and QUALITY

These two essentials explain the great increase in demand for our bread since the installation of our new electrical bread mixer.

We have now a thoroughly up-to-date and sanitary bread plant, including bread mixer, sanitary steel troughs, etc. As a result we are able to place before the public a pure, clean wholesome, smooth-grained loaf of bread.

We ask all housewives who desire purity and quality in their bread to try a loaf of this bread and be convinced of its superiority.

unless you need him.—You listen with grave attention to every word he says.

But Then

What do you do with that vitally important thing—the prescription he leaves.

Do you use the same care in choosing the druggist to fill it that you do in choosing the doctor who writes it? And shouldn't you? Doesn't the success of the doctor's treatment depend more than upon anything else on the exactness and care, and the freshness, strength and purity of its ingredients.

Election Valid, Says Ministe

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—Mexican Minister of the Interior Manuel Garza Aldape, was yesterday if the few votes cast in the City of Mexico fight be as an indication of how much work had been done elsewhere in the public and if it looked, in view of the small number of votes cast though the elections would be declared null by Congress. The Minister replied that the question which decide the legality of the election apart from the absence of a will not be whether a majority of the voters in each electoral district casts a vote; it being immaterial for instance, if only 10,000 people in the capital voted.

Reluctance to go to the polls Sunday was genuine. Besides a lack of experience in such affairs was said to be generally felt as that some evil consequences would follow should the voter choose a losing candidate.

Constitutionalists claim that the Piedras Negras polls closed day the vote stood about 95 for 1,200 for Huerta, and that hundreds of votes were added to the polls Sunday night. In some cases, it is asserted, a single voter voted in the names of a dozen different persons.

Interview Officially Denied

LONDON, Oct. 28.—"The British Minister to Mexico did see journalists but in the course of interview he made no reference of any sort or kind to the intention or the policy of the United States in regard to Mexico."

The foregoing is an authentic statement issued yesterday at British Foreign Office where officials have heard at length from Lionel Carden, the British Minister at Mexico City, on the subject of divergent reports relative to the contents of his recent interview.

Freshmen, 110 in number, were dropped through a hole in the floor, tossed from floor to ceiling in blankets; put in an 'electric chair,' and carefully rolled in black eggs and flour.

Rules in both colleges are strict against hazing, the penalizing expulsion. Whether the classmen will be able to make college authorities clearly distinguish a difference between hazing and initiation depends on the fate of a large number.

Treating a New Rope.

A new rope, particularly if it is often causes trouble because of stiffness. If used as a hayfork in any place where it runs through a set of pulleys it is apt to be strained until it has been used for some time. This trouble may be avoided by boiling the rope in water. The usual way is to coil the rope around a boiler or large soap kettle and with water and bring to a boil. The rope is then stretched out and allowed to dry, when it will be found to be soft and pliable. Manila rope is usually soft enough to use without such treatment.—J. M. Drew, University of Minnesota.

TO GO TO OTTAWA.Western Farmers Draft Long Series of Tariff Proposals.

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 28.—At a meeting of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, at which representatives of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Grain Growers' Associations and the United Farmers of Alberta were present, it was unanimously decided to take steps for a deputation representing the organized farmers of Canada to proceed to Ottawa before or near the opening of the next session of Parliament to lay before the Government representations embodied in a series of resolutions dealing with the tariff, co-operative legislation and a sample market.

A resolution dealing with the tariff follows:

"1. That we urge the Parliament of Canada to increase, at its first session, the British preference to at least 50 per cent. and to provide for a gradual increase from year to year until we have free trade with Great Britain in five years.

"2. That Parliament accept the offer of the United States of a free interchange of all agricultural and animal products between Canada and the United States.

"3. That all foodstuffs not provided for in the above offer of the United States be transferred to the free list.

"4. That agricultural implements, lumber, and cement be transferred to the free list.

"5. That pending the passage of legislation asked for herein, any duties now imposed under Canadian customs tariff which are the means of countervailing duties being imposed against any food products of the country by any foreign country be immediately removed.

"6. That any tariff or trade concession granted to any other country be immediately extended to Great Britain."

Other resolutions ask for legislation to permit co-operative societies of all kinds, whether for credit or trade, and for the inspection of all scales in grain elevators and warehouses, to be placed in the jurisdiction of the board of grain commissioners.

A resolution was also passed against the establishment of a sample market until such time as the grain growers are agreed that the same can be operated to their benefit.

BOMBAY FACES CRISIS.Pearl Merchant Fails With Heavy Losses—Banks In Peril.

BOMBAY, Oct. 28.—There is an alarming crisis in Bombay. Failure followed failure after the recent bank suspensions, and the rush of depositors to withdraw their money has strained the resources even of sound Indian banks. The crisis then spread to a share market. A broker doing a big business who tried to bear the market in mill shares with the assistance of certain banks collapsed. His liabilities were nearly half a million pounds. Several other failures followed in quick succession. The Stock Exchange was paralyzed. Business was suspended.

While this crisis was in progress a fresh shock came yesterday in the form of the failure of an Arab pearl merchant doing a big trade, and known in the market as "The Lion." His liabilities are said to be over $300,000. Many other failures quickly followed. Several banks which were advancing money on pearls are deeply involved. Further bank failures are feared.

BRINGS IN POLITICS.Premier McBride Talks Navy at Ottawa Canadian Club.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, who was the guest of the Canadian Club at luncheon yesterday, created rather a furore when he launched into the naval question in his speech.

It is a cardinal rule of the club that nothing of a political or controversial nature shall be introduced in the speeches at the luncheons, but Sir Richard came out in no uncertain tone.

"I am not going to say anything controversial," said Sir Richard, in beginning his address, "but in a few modest words, not to give a message—that were a dangerous thing to attempt—but to tell of western feeling on a certain question which was closely associated with that section of the Empire. First, I wish to speak of the navy and what Canada should do towards her share of empire responsibility. If my voice from British Columbia be of value to this assembly, I would like to say with all the emphasis I may command how deeply we regret and deplore the inability of Canada to do her share towards Canadian, towards Imperial defence, in failing to vote the $35,000,000, as was proposed a few months ago for the assistance of a program of the British Admiralty.

"I can't believe it is impossible to discuss this matter on other than a controversial basis, one that will bring up political discord. The theme of national defence should occupy a plane higher than the political wardroom, the hustings, or even the national forum. If we have to introduce political differences into such a question we will drift and drift till we are so seriously involved that we cannot extricate ourselves without sacrificing our dignity and self-respect. We in British Columbia feel that we have come to the point when, in manly fashion, we should do our share in the defence, not of only British Columbia, Canada, but of the Empire as well."

Aside from the utterances of the British Columbia Premier, the feature of the luncheon was the kind words of welcome to his Royal Highness and expressions of good will to her Royal Highness, and the gracious reply.

TEUTONIC IN DANGER.

Big Liner Has a Narrow Escape From

Hitting Iceberg.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The White Star Liner Teutonic, which arrived in the Mersey yesterday from Montreal with nearly 400 second and third class passengers, had a somewhat exciting experience. When about 172 miles east of Belle Isle on Wednesday morning the Teutonic encountered a thick fog. During the evening an enormous iceberg was sighted right ahead, almost on top of the vessel. The captain promptly put the helm hard aport, and the engine full-speed astern, and then the liner swung slowly to starboard, just in the nick of time—and the iceberg passed silently along the portside within a few yards of the stern.

Old Injury May Prove Fatal.

PORT ARTHUR, Oct. 28.—Police Chief McLellan is unconscious from a paralytic stroke. Doctors say the cause is a beating he received at the coal dock riot here last year. The Trades and Labor Council have been moving for a pardon for his assailant, who at the time was sentenced to ten years.

"My father," said the small boy to the lady who was calling on his mother, "is a great man. He knows what time it is without even looking at his watch."

"What do you mean, Tommy?" queried the visitor.

Latin America Says Wilson.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 28.—While avoiding any mention specifically of Mexico, or any European influence connected with the Mexican situation, President Wilson delivered a speech here yesterday which appeared to be freighted with significance, and which served to point with further directness the policy of the United States not only toward Mexico, but toward all Central and Southern American Republics.

Mr. Wilson spoke before the Southern Commercial Congress, and the big audience which heard him constantly was swept with cheers and applause.

In the course of his address he said:

"I want to take this occasion to say that the United States will never again seek one additional foot of territory by conquest. She will devote herself to showing that she knows how to make honorable and fruitful use of the territory she has. And she must regard it as one of the duties of friendship to see that from no quarter are material interests made superior to human liberty and national opportunity."

Material interests—a phrase much in use internationally of late in characterizing the attitude of foreign nations toward Mexico—frequently was employed by the President. He declared the American Republics had suffered long from hard bargains forced upon them by concessionaries seeking "material interests" in the countries affected. The President declared that through motives of "morality and not expediency" the United States desired to help the Latin-American republics to "an emancipation from the subordination which has been inevitable to foreign enterprises."

ULSTER MUST STAY.

Control of Education and Police May Be Granted Says Grey.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in a speech at Berwick last night explained that what the Government was willing to concede to satisfy Ulster was a sort of home rule within home rule, giving Ulster control of her own education, police and matters of that kind.

It would thus seem clear that in his recent announcement of policy with regard to home rule in Ulster Premier Asquith had no intention of offering even the temporary exclusion of Ulster from the operation of the home rule bill.

"Arson Squad" Busy Again.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Militant suffragettes yesterday morning set fire to and burned to the ground Till House, a fine residence at Bramshott, twelve miles from Aldershot, belonging to T. McKenna, a brother of the Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna. A quantity of suffrage literature and several kerosene cans were found lying on the ground together with the notification that the "Arson Squad" had set fire to the mansion as a protest against the forcible feeding of imprisoned suffragettes.

Wanted In Montreal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Gordon Salisbury, who was arrested Saturday at the request of Chicago officers on charges of larceny amounting to $600, was held in $8,000 bail yesterday when the court was informed that he was wanted in Montreal, Springfield and Hartford for evasion of bail bonds. The case was continued until Friday.

As Prof. Whiting and as Charles Derubach, the prisoner is alleged to have stolen money in Chicago within the past year.

Impertinent.

Speaking of a man noted for his impertinence, an acquaintance said:

"Blank's impudence was second only to that of a waiter I heard about the other day."

"Look here, waiter," said a guest, "this fish is not cooked properly."

"I know it, sir," said the waiter, "but you told me it was for your wife."

"Well, what of that?" asked the surprised guest.

"Why," said the waiter, "I knew that if the lady was your wife she couldn't be very particular."

Too Much.

Tommy, having disposed of three helpings of sausage and doughnuts, sat mournfully regarding his empty plate.

Observing his pensive expression, Aunt Sarah kindly asked, "Tommy, won't you have some more doughnuts?"

"No'm!" the poor lad replied with feeling emphasis, "I don't want them I got now!"

His Humble Desire.

"Will you object to my weighing myself?" said a meek-looking man to his wife as they stood near a weighing machine on the platform of a railway station.

"What do you want to weigh yourself for?" she asked sharply.

"Only to see, dear, if you would allow me to have my own 'weigh' for once!"—London Answers.

HIGHWAYS AND HISTORY

"HANSARD" SHOWS THAT BORDEN GOVERNMENT KILLED THE BILL.

When the Highways Aid Bill was first presented to Parliament during the session of 1911-12 the Opposition fought for the straight principle of apportionment of the money amongst the Provinces according to population and for its expenditure direct by the Provincial Governments, as was promised by Hon. Frank Cochrane when he first introduced the Bill in the House of Commons on Jan. 22nd, 1912. In introducing the Bill, Hon. Mr. Cochrane said it provided "that a certain amount of money should be granted to the different Provinces to build and improve Highways." Presented by Sir Wilfred Laurier for more definite statement in this regard Mr. Cochrane said "the money will be divided the same as our subsidies for the different Provinces."

When the printed Bill was placed in the hands of the members it did not contain this provision, as promised by Hon. Cochrane. Therefore, the Liberals asked that the minister's promise be incorporated in the Bill, and on its third reading, March 1st, 1912, Sir Wilfred Laurier moved an amendment that—"The sum of money to be voted in any year under this Act shall be apportioned amongst and PAID TO the several Provinces of the Dominion in proportion to the respective population of such provinces as shown by the next preceding census."

This was rejected by the Government. Sir Wilfred Laurier asked that in view of Hon. Mr. Cochrane's promise, and the importance of the matter, a conference should be had with the Senate to adjust their differences. This was peremptorily refused by Premier Borden with the result that the Bill was abandoned.

The arbitrary position taken by the Government was shown by Hon. Frank Cochrane, who had charge of the Bill, when he said—"IF THE BILL IS NOT PASSED BY THE SENATE AS IT HAS BEEN PASS-

CHASING THE SHADOW. FIGURES SHOW THAT THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT OVERLOOKED THE SUBSTANCE.

During the past few months, according to Government figures, Canada exported goods to the value of $130,811,013 and imported to the value of $227,675,270.

Canada exported to Great Britain goods valued at $59,985,645 and took from Great Britain imports of $48,188,012.

Canada sent to the United States goods valued at $52,702,585 and imported from the same country to the extent of $149,367,823.

Less than 25% of British goods came to Canada duty free. Nearly 37% came here duty free from the United States.

Canada's gross trade with the United States for the four months was $108,173,657, or more than $40,000,000 less than her imports from the United States.

Our gross trade with the United States was $202,070,408 or almost double that with Great Britain. Our imports from the States more than trebled those from the Mother country.

In face of these facts the Borden Government has steadily refused the demand of Western consumers that the British preference should be increased to 50% as a step toward actual free trade with the Mother country.

In face of these facts Hon. Geo. E. Foster has been kept touring the world, ostensibly looking for odd corners to trade with, while the Government has systematically neglected the two countries with which 4,5 of our trade is done.

During the four months covered by these figures the United States has put into effect a new tariff, reducing its taxes on imported goods by 28% for the benefit of its own consumers. During the same four months Mr. Borden and his colleagues have spent most of their time enjoying splendid trips all over the map.

During these four months the Borden Government has collected taxes of $50,444,061 on imported goods.

Have the people of Canada received any fair return for this vast sum?

WHY NOT A MICROSCOPE?

A contract has been made by the Borden Government with American firms for the construction of the largest telescope in the world, to be erected at Ottawa. It is to be of the reflector type, but it will not reflect the "no truck nor trade with the Yankees" cry the Tories raised in 1911. Although it is to be the largest in the world it will not be powered that there will be no tariff revision next Session.

To this Sir Wilfrid Laurier replies "If you do not care to do it or think you are not able to do it, make way for better men. We have done it once and we can do it again."

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.

"PATRIOTS" OF 1911 NO LONGER AFRAID OF TRADE WITH STATES.

During the election campaign of 1911 the anti-reciprocity high tariff fed interests bombarded the English speaking people of Canada with declarations that if "the pact" were ratified and Canada should trade more freely with her neighbors the Dominion would be pried out of the Empire and become a mere adjunct to the United States. After two years of the Borden Government Canada imports three times as much from the States as from Great Britain and exports almost as much south of the border as to the Mother country. It is certain that with the great reduction of the American tariff Canada's exports to the States will increase proportionately.

Where now is the "committee of eighteen" whose words and money were so much to the front in 1911? Where is "British born" Arthur Hawkes? Where do the Toronto World and News stand? The noisy Union Jack fever of two years ago has cooled. The noble eighteen are silent as long as their own high tariff protection is secure, while their selling power to the States is increased. Arthur Hawkes has become disgusted with the "empty shell" Naval subterfuge of Mr. Borden. The Toronto News and World are demanding the abrogation of the Canadian duty on wheat and flour so that Canadian wheat and flour may go free to the States.

After such a somersault perhaps before long Mr. Blondin will be offering to patch up the holes in the Union Jack he used to be so eloquent about, and will enlist Bourassa, Nantel, Codette, Pelletier and the rest of the Nationalists of the Tory Alliance into support of a naval policy which will include Canadian ships, manned by Canadians and controlled by the Canadian Government, as part of the Imperial navy.

CIGAR BOXES.

There is a Tremendous Trade in These Cedar Wood Receptacles.

Cigar boxes are a negligible quantity to the average smoker who stands before a tastily dressed showcase and buys a "five cent straight" or a "three for a quarter." Few of even the most inveterate smokers ever stop to think of the number of these boxes used in the United States during a year, or from where they come.

Thirty millions is the total number of boxes supplied to cigar manufacturers in the United States. Many millions more enter the country filled with foreign rolled cigars from Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Manufacturers declare that the boxes made from Spanish cedar, a wood which is rarely seen outside of Cuba, is the best for packing the seductive weed.

Various woods have been tried, but wherever used commissioners have protested that even the finest of cigars were spoiled by putting them in boxes made from other wood than Spanish ter, a conference should be had with the Senate to adjust their differences. This was peremptorily refused by Premier Borden with the result that the Bill was abandoned.

The arbitrary position taken by the Government was shown by Hon. Frank Cochrane, who had charge of the Bill, when he said—"IF THE BILL IS NOT PASSED BY THE SENATE AS IT HAS BEEN PASSED BY THE COMMONS, WE DO NOT PROPOSE TO EXPEND ANY MONEY and we will put the responsibility upon whom it belongs for killing the Bill."

The Government, therefore, killed the Bill by abandoning it.

At last Session the Bill was again brought up with the Federal control principle unchanged, and again the Liberals asked that Mr. Cochrane should make good his promise by embodying it in the Bill. This he refused to do, and on April 21st, 1913, Sir Wilfred Laurier moved "that the said Bill be now read a second time but that it be resolved that this House while recognizing the importance of assisting out of the Federal Treasury in the improvement of Highways, is of opinion that any appropriation for that object should be allotted and paid to the Governments of the respective Provinces in proportion to the population of the said Provinces respectively as determined by the last decennial census."

This was defeated on a straight party vote, and a similar amendment on the third reading by Mr. Guthrie, with an additional clause aimed to prevent the Dominion Government undertaking highway construction in the Provinces in contravention of Provincial rights, was voted down on April 29th.

The Bill then went to the Senate where Hon. Mr. Kerr, moved an amendment—"The sum of money voted in any year to be expended under this Act shall be apportioned amongst and paid to the several Provinces of the Dominion in proportion to the population of such Provinces respectively, as shown in the preceding census."

This was carried in the Senate and again on June 5th last the Borden Government refused to accept the amendment or to have a conference with the Senate to adjust the differences.

The record is clear. The Liberals in Parliament have consistently demanded the division of money for highways in fair proportion amongst the Provinces and the observation of constitutional guarantees for Provincial rights in its expenditure. The Borden Government, notwithstanding Hon. Mr. Cochrane's express promise, rather than accept these principles, abandoned the Bill twice.

On June 5th, 1913, the Liberals in the House of Commons moved that the sum of $1,500,000 provided in the estimate of Highways under the defunct Bill, be made an ordinary subsidy so that the money will be apportioned amongst the Provinces this year. On a straight party vote the Borden Government refused this by 42-21.

It is thus clear that the Government not the Opposition, has killed the Highways Aid Bill and refused granting the money to the Provinces.

A contract has been made by the Borden Government with American firms for the construction of the largest telescope in the world, to be erected at Ottawa. It is to be of the reflector type, but it will not reflect the "no truck nor trade with the Yankees" cry the Tories raised in 1911. Although it is to be the largest in the world it will not be powerful enough to locate the Borden Naval policy.

RELIEF FOR CONSUMER. LIBERALS STAND FOR REDUCTION IN COST OF LIVING.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Joliette on the 17th touched a vital point of present day affairs when he declared that the really pressing business for the Government to consider was the abnormally high cost of living in Canada. "It is not" he said "the cost of dreadnoughts but the cost of bread and the necessities of life, the high cost of living, that Mr. Borden should look to, and how to reduce this is an important thing. While Mr. Borden is trying to regulate the wars of the Empire, we, the Opposition, will try to reduce the cost of living.

This was met with criticism from Government papers, who alleged that during fifteen years the Liberal Government did nothing in this regard.

One of the first things the Liberal Government did in 1896 was to enquire into the tariff through a commission of Ministers. The result was the first Fielding Tariff in 1897, when the duty was altered on 140 articles, with such re-adjustment as to materially lessen the burden on the consumers while at the same time affording scope for an unprecedented increase in trade.

Then came the British preference—a new note in Imperial progress—which was gradually increased to 33%. The immediate result was not merely an increase in imports from Great Britain; the Preference forced every other country doing business with Canada to cut prices in order to meet British competition under the new tariff. The benefit was to the consumer.

In addition to this came the development of cold storage facilities and the other improvements under the Agricultural administration of the Hon. Mr. Fisher, which resulted in immense development of trade and general advantage throughout the country.

Efforts were also made towards securing reciprocal trade with the United States. The then high tariff Washington Government received these approaches in such manner that Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared the next move must come from Washington, and the Canadian people heartily endorsed his stand. Ultimately Washington did move, and this resulted in the reciprocity pact of 1911, a proposition directly calculated to increase trade and reduce the cost of living.

That was defeated by the double faced campaign of the Tory-Nationalist combination. Now the United States have abolished the tariff on most of the necessities of life (taxed from 25 to 30% in Canada), and reduced their general tariff 28%. The result of this is tersely put by the Weekly Sun, the organ of the Canadian agricultural interest, as "cheaper for them, dearer for us."

For two years the Borden Government has been in power. It has almost doubled the National expenditures and increased the taxation to meet its extravagance; it has spent money recklessly on every conceivable project until even the present huge income has not been sufficient, so that while the Government boasts of a $50,000,000 surplus it is a habitual borrower in the British financial market. In the face of all this extravagance and huge taxation and the increased cost of living it is announced to the Philippines. Manufacturers declare that the boxes made from Spanish cedar, a wood which is rarely seen outside of Cuba, is the best for packing the seductive weed.

Various woods have been tried, but wherever used connoisseurs have protested that even the finest of cigars were spoiled by putting them in boxes made from other wood than Spanish cedar. This wood always retains the flavor of a good cigar, and some assert that it greatly improves the flavor. The reason given is that the Spanish cedar grows only in that soil which produces the finest quality of what is known as Havana tobacco.—Washington Star.

The Relative Who Never Abandons One Afflicted With Insanity.

"It's a funny thing about a lunatic's relatives," said the superintendent of an insane asylum. "There are reliable statistics about the way a lunatic's relatives stand by him.

"The relative who stands by a lunatic least, who stops visiting him to the asylum first of all, is a brother. The next relative to drop off is a wife. That sounds hard, but it's true. Don't count on your wife if you are going to become a lunatic. Next husbands drop off. A little truer than wives husbands are, but only a little. Next fathers abandon the lunatic, next sisters.

"One relative never abandons him. Till she dies, or he dies, she comes regularly on visiting day, bringing underwear and ties, cakes and tobacco—provided, of course, that the lunatic's a male. If it's a female this relative is equally faithful. And even though as sometimes happens, the poor, mad creature hates her, curses her, tries to strike her when she visits him, she still remains faithful. When her visits cease they cease for only one reason—death.

Origin of King's Counsel.

King's counsel has the great Bacon as the founder of the order. He had no inclination to be made a "serjeant" and persuaded Queen Elizabeth to appoint him "queen's counsel extraordinary." James I granted to Bacon a patent, confirming his status as "one of our counsel learned in the law," as K. C.'s are still officially designated. An annual salary of £40 was originally attached to the position and was received by all "silks" down to 1831, when parliament abolished the salary, together with the allowance for stationery and bags. The receipt of a salary by K. C.'s meant that they had accepted an office of profit under the crown and those who were members of parliament had to seek re-election.—London Tatler.

No other animal is safe where they abound, and for this reason they are rigidly barred from certain territory; but unless emboldened by starvation they will never attack a human being who has the nerve to make a show of resistance.

Such is the treachery of the dogs that visitors are always warned not to attempt to pet them. Even if the dog you are stroking does not take advantage of the occasion to help himself to a mouthful of your flesh, the others are likely to imagine that a banquet is in progress and make haste to participate. A driver that slips and falls among the dogs while arranging their harness is lucky if the fangs of all of them are not buried in him in the twinkling of an eye.

These facts may grieve the dog lover, but he may find comfort in the reflection that the Simon-pure husky is really not a dog at all; a wolf he is in disposition, voice and appearance, that centuries of enslavement by the Eskimos and northern settlers have brought to a state only of sullen submission. Of doggish traits, such as attachment to man and faithfulness to his master, he is entirely innocent. Instead of barking when he gets excited, he howls. Place a gray husky with one

ART OF WEIGHING,

Wonderful Scales That Are Not Made of Anything.

THE LAW OF FALLING BODIES.

By This, Thanks to Newton and Liebnitz and the Calculus of Differentials, the Weight of Suns and Planets May Be Accurately Determined.

The art of weighing has expanded into a comprehensive science and can no longer be called a mere art. Scales are made of metal, but the set herein described is not made of anything. Scales are in hourly use that can weigh a pencil mark whose length is one-fourth of an inch; or a section of a hair of equal length. The usual practice in weighing runs from grains, ounces, pounds up to tons, usually one ton, and then up to fifty or more tons in railroad weighing, costing hundreds and thousands of dollars.

But humans would find it quite difficult to make scales that would weigh millions, billions, trillions, quadrillions, quintillions, sextillions, septillions, octillions and nonillions of tons, or decillions. An instrument able to weigh a decillion tons can now be purchased for one cent—a pencil. The scales are not made of metal; instead a set and fixed specific speed is the next to all powerful engine used. But it is far more easy to run a locomotive or steamship without knowing a single law of these complex machines than to even attempt to use the speed-scales without knowing every minute detail of every velocity law of moving bodies.

Let a street car start from rest and keep moving faster and faster until its rate of motion is, say, twenty miles per hour at the end of one minute. If the speed of the car increased uniformly during the entire minute its average speed is ten miles per hour, because it started from rest and increased to twenty miles per hour. If a body moves during one minute at twenty miles per hour the distance traversed will be speed multiplied by time, or twenty miles multiplied by one-sixtieth of an hour, or one-third of a mile; but the average speed in case of the car is ten miles per hour, so that the distance moved over is half as great or one-sixth mile. This is a fundamental law of nature and is of enormous importance.

Law: For uniformly increasing speed, starting from rest, the velocity increases with the time, but the distance traversed is that moved over by the moving body with its average speed, or one-half.

If measuring the distance fallen through by a body let fall at the rigidly exact beginning of one second of time to the rigidly exact end thereof is difficult, what shall be said of finding how fast it is falling at the end of the second. Go try: work from the ages of twenty to sixty years daily and you will fall. The fact is, the time required to find the mathematically exact specific speed of a falling body in still air was almost that required to measure the distance of the nearest star, about 120 years.

Then Atwood invented his machine,

WHEN YOU BUILD.

The Hardware In Your New Home Should Be Good.

Though your contract for a home usually includes a clause which gives the builder entire leeway in the matter of hardware it is well to know something about this yourself—as it is with everything else. Too many people are content to leave the details of door knobs and window trimmings to the contractor, little realizing how important it is to have them right—right, that is, from the standpoint both of utility and decoration.

"House owners should demand reliable information on this point from their dealers when they come to compare the difference in cost of two or more lines of hardware," warns a writer in the House Beautiful. "Pieces of hardware may be very different in quality, though looking the same. For instance, one might examine three times of hardware, all of similar pattern and appearing identical in finish, yet one line is bronze plated on steel, another thin solid bronze and the third thick solid bronze. Not knowing conditions, the puzzled amateur wonders why prices on the three lines vary so

If there had been a spirit therapist at the hut it would have recorded temperature of at least 30 degrees zero.

In the first appearance of the sun-warmth men, wrapped to their eyes, emerged from the hut on snow and drew from out the adjoining a long, low sledge on which was a great heap of skins. They were about to start for the trading some 40 miles up the coast. From cost of the sledge—they call it a sled—extended for about eight feet at sealskin strand known in those as a bridle. Clearly it was that draft animals of some kind were attached thereto. But where they? The trappers knew. Looking the 10 little mounds of snow, one called sharply, "Ho, ho—ho, ho, themselves, arose and shook the from their shaggy coats. Another call and they came bounding to matik. Kicking and cuffing them, appers got them into harness. To op at the free end of the bridle buttoned the sealskin traces, one of extended over each dog's back, to divide into two loops, which his front legs were thrust through joined over his breast. Now there great hullabaloo, the dogs leaping illy about, tugging at their traces owing with all their might as the took seats in the komatik. The front had a whip of sealus hide 25 feet long. Out it flew with a crack. "Whit! Whit!" shout driver. With a final chorus of the dogs bent forward, straining o get their heavy load under way, in a mad rush they were off, trying lengths of their traces per g them to travel together like a of wolves.

dually their pace slackened until me a gentle trot. But on and on they went, following the coast cross frozen bays' and the little of lands that lay between, their keeping them to their duty with of "Whit! Whit" and an occasional crack of the whip. Sometimes the rs ran beside the komatik on their toes to get their blood in circulation once in a while they would have the dogs haul the komatik up a slope. Darkness was falling as approached the end of their 40-journey. The dogs were tired and more and more. The driver, through and hungry, became savage use of the whip. But suddenly their own accord the dogs broke run, and again filled the air with howls. The whitewashed buildings post had come in sight. Faster still flew the dogs, and, swinging matik dizzily around a point of bay gave a series of great leaps unds, to draw up at the post with nd flourish that would have done to a fashionable coaching party.

Of doggish traits, such as attachment to man and faithfulness to his master, he is entirely innocent. Instead of barking when he gets excited, he howls. Place a gray Husky with one of the big gray wolves of the northern woods and even the men who have driven dogs all their lives would find it extremely difficult to tell which was which. A Hudson's Bay trapper, in fact, a man personally known to the writer, once chased a pair of wolves a

Whatever else may be said about him, the Husky, with his long, wavy hair, nearly erect ears, sharp-pointed muzzle and fine, bushy tail, is beyond dispute a handsome beast. And if he possesses the failings common to all predatory animals, he certainly is entitled to the admiration that the alert bearing and knowing ways of those creatures are wont to excite. There are several kinds of Husky dogs, which differ slightly from one another in appearance and disposition; but the dogs of the Hudson's Bay region, with which the writer is personally acquainted and regarding which this article mainly is concerned, are conceded to be of the purest breed and may be considered as representative.

Out For a Dicker.

The old fashioned farmer, who liked nothing more than to dicker, bobs up now and then to rub elbows with the moderns. In a department store recently one of the old fashioned kind approached the clerk and inquired:

"How much are you asking for rub- ber boots today?"

Then, when he was told the price, he looked wise and queried:

"And how much are you gettin'?"—New York Globe.

unusual, what shall be said of finding how fast it is falling at the end of the second. Go try; work from the ages of twenty to sixty years daily and you will fail. The fact is, the time required to find the mathematically exact specific speed of a falling body in still air was almost that required to measure the distance of the nearest star, about 120 years.

Then Atwood invented his machine, and this finally came to some near approach to accuracy. But this instrument of precision fell far short of the electrical chronographic apparatus. When all of this very complex mechanism is in perfect order it releases the ball at the exact beginning of a second and records the absolute time on the cylinder of a chronograph electrically and repeats the process at the absolute end of the second so far as human hands are able to do rigidly accurate work.

The moment that those supermen, Newton and Liebnitz, discovered that mighty power, beside which all else human pales into insignificance—the stupendous calculus or differentials—every mathematician saw immediately that one of nature's most magnificent laws was found in falling bodies. And then began the relentless and arduous self-imposed work of more than a hundred years to find the set specific speed acquired by a falling body at the instantaneous and absolutely exact end of the first exactly measured second of time since man appeared.

The result is one grand, all potent, all powerful mean or average of a century of world wide measures, the diamond of diamonds, the most valuable number in possession of man, the astronomical balance:

Sixteen and one-tenth feet fallen to end of the first second: 32.2 feet per second speed at end of first second.

That is, a body let fall will, under the action of the earth's attraction of gravitation, fall 16.1 feet during the first absolute second of time, and at the absolute end of the second will be in motion with a velocity of 32.2 feet per second. These numbers constitute the most accurate and all powerful scales in existence.—Edgar Lucien Lar- kin in New York American.

Turkish Postage Stamps.

Every one who has collected stamps must have noticed the absence of sovereigns' heads from those of Turkey. That this is so is due to the fact that Mohammedans think a representation of the human face or figure unlawful. Therefore Turkish stamps carry the crescent, which the Turks borrowed from the Byzantines after the fall of Constantinople. They also used a complicated, arbitrary sign, supposed to be the signature of the sultan.

For outside doors it is always best to use solid brass or bronze bolts (hinges), though steel bolts plated with brass or bronze to match the lock trim are usually considered good enough for inside doors, which do not come in contact with rain or snow. All outside lock trim should be of solid metal, for plated goods will not stand the weather since steel, no matter how carefully it is plated, soon rusts. Front door locks should be of the highest grade only, as no other part of the house hardware gets so much hard usage.

Hints For the Housewife.

Always screen all foods and do not unnecessarily expose your dishes.

When cooling newly baked bread cover it slightly with a clean cloth.

If the top of the stove is crowded the oven can be utilized for cooking vegetables which are usually cooked on top. Place the vegetables in covered agate pans.

It is best to heat the plates before putting hot pies on them when first taken out of the oven. If hot pies are put on cold plates they sweat, making the under crust soggy.

If you want to bake potatoes quickly clean them and pour boiling water over them. Let them stand on the stove for five or ten minutes, then put them in the oven to bake.

Instead of melting butter when you want to mix it with sugar, place the butter in a double boiler and allow it to get warm. It will then beat up very easily with the sugar and will not cause the cake to be heavy.

Vegetables In the Hair.

Among the absurdities of Marie Antoinette's time was the use of vegetables for decorating the hair, "Ask my niece, Mme. de Matignon," we read in the memoirs of the Marquise de Cregny, "if it is not true that in 1785 she had her hair dressed a la jardiniere with a red-check duster, in to which M. Leonard, the queen's hairdresser, had artistically inserted a small artichoke, a broccoli, a fine carrot and some radishes. When London Picot (the comtesse de Lemath-Picot, a rich Creole) saw it she was so delighted that she exclaimed, "I will never wear anything but vegetables. It is so simple and more natural than flowers."—London Chronicle.

Sugar and Old Age.

The belief is gaining ground in many quarters that if you wish to stave off old age and to have the feeling of perennial youth and gaiety, no matter what your actual years may be, you cannot do better than eat plenty of sugar. One of the pioneers of this theory is Prof. Metchnikoff, who has made exhaustive experiments to prove his statements. There are some who even assert that not only does the frequent eating of sugar keep one from growing old, but that if a man or woman will begin the sugar treatment, even after senility has set in, the effect will be so great as to amount to a complete change in his or her character.

The Man Who Sells Groceries.

Did you, Mr. Grocer, ever consider how many of the things you already nine-tenths sold to your customers for you before you buy from your manufacturer? The fast food, the soap, the syrup, many, many things that represent daily household wants. Think many of these standard articles advertised by the manufacturer in the columns of this newspaper to your benefit. Here's a suggestion for more business: Look over the advertising in The Express and see many of the things advertised on your shelves. Then make a wide display of these advertised articles and watch your sales increase. Want to make the advertising of this newspaper 100 per cent. effort and you can help do this with yourself by meeting the demand both ways. Sell the goods advertised in The Express.

The Ladies Musical Club.

The annual concert of the Musical Club given in the Opera last Monday evening was the opening of the club's work for 1913-14. A very large and appreciative audience was present. The recitation of the Scottish Song-drama by Miss Macleod and Mr. Hamish Macleod would have been extremely interesting to those interested in folk songs without the rich embellishment in the way of costuming and setting provided. It is possible at first some were surprised by the novelty of acting on the concert form the incidents described in ballads. In their costuming Macleod and Mr. Mackay used beautiful dress of the old monarchs, consequently their entertainment is far removed from common-place. They are art much dramatic power and in duets "Hunting Tower" and "Old Bawbee" received hearty applause of the audience. Miss Macleod probably at her best in the old fashioned ballad "The land o' the leal". Mackay delighted everyone in rendering of such fine old ballads "Willie's gae the Melville" and "The Piper o' Dundee" resulting in a recall with "The wee c o' Fife." The two singers had assistance of two admirable amateur Miss Jean and Emily Buchanan. The former is a brilliant pianist having played Chopin's Polonaise in a most excellent style and later in the evening played Weber's Rondo Brillante so delightfully that the audience demanded an encore, when Buchanan rendered an unnamed composition on the full tone scale. Emily Buchanan bows the violin in the most impressive manner producing a lovely legato quality which was apparent in D'Ambrosio's "Mazurka" and a set of old Viennese waltzes. She responded graciously to the persistent encores. The Misses Buchanan are artists of a very high and far superior to anyone who have engaged to appear here under direction of the musical club. Emily Buchanan played all the accompaniments in a most artistic manner winning the admiration of the audience.

Victim of Explosion.

On Friday, George Laraby, about forty years of age, was the victim of an explosion which occurred on the farm of J. P. Elliott, at Hawley, about ten miles from Napanee. He was burned about the face, and will probably lose the sight of one eye. His left arm and hand were bruised. Laraby went to Kingston on Saturday morning and entered the general hospital for treatment. The circumstances of the accident are that he was employed in drilling a well on the Elliott place. He was loading six holes. Three had, it appears, been fired, and Mr. Laraby was removing refuse from the others when the explosion occurred.

Crate-Fattening Chickens.

Mr. Jas. Dawson, Switzerville, crate-fattened his chickens according to the methods advocated by the Department of Agriculture, Napanee. He shipped to Montreal and received 21c. per lb. dressed weight. Mr. G. B. Curran, Napanee, conducted a crate-fattening demonstration at Napanee this fall. Fifteen White Wyandotte cockerels were placed in the crates. Their live weight was 70 lbs. on Sept. 20th, valued at 12c. per lb., and the dressed weight after starving and killing on Oct. 15th, was 95 lbs. The birds were shipped to Gatehouse, Montreal, and the price received was 20c. per lb., plus the express charges. Farmers, instead of killing their thin chickens just before "Turkey Day" should shut up the cockerels and fatten them, and ship to Montreal or Toronto. Full directions as to fattening, killing and shipping of poultry can be obtained from Mr. G. B. Curran, Agricultural Office, Napanee.

Rummage Sale
November 14th and 15th.CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP.

To the Editor:

The church has undertaken to save the world today by means of "Christian Citizenship." By this expression is meant the application of Christian rules of conduct by Christians to political affairs.

The great trouble with the world today, say the advocates of Christian citizenship, is that Christians do not apply their Christianity in Public affairs. They do not at the polls, in the legislature, and in public office, put their religion into practice. They allow the government to be run very largely by bad men upon bad principles, when it might be run by good men upon Christian principles.

In Christian countries good men, we are told, are really in the majority, and could control the affairs of Government if they only would. We are told that if Christians everywhere would only wake up and take an active interest in politics, they could vote bad men out of office and good men in who would make and enforce righteous laws, and the evils that afflict society would soon be remedied.

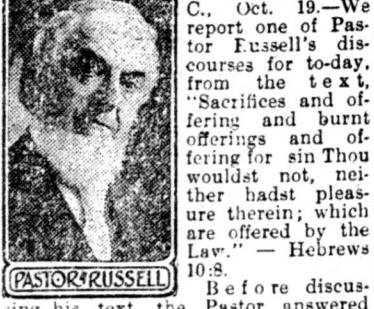

It is the mission of the church to save the world, and by "Christian citizenship" this salvation is to be effected.

The cities are to be reformed, all public offices are to be filled by Christians, Christian laws are to be enacted and enforced, and the wholesale regeneration of human society is to be brought about.

They will admit that the old-time method of individual regeneration by means of a change of heart, is good to a degree, but altogether too slow for the present age, when the great need is to secure Christian government and SACRIFICES NOT REQUIRED BY GODSacrifices Under the Jewish Law and Their Antitypes.

Pastor Russell's Preaching—Why Not "Fashionable"—Why It Is Doctrinal—Eating God's Word—Unrequired and Undesirable Sacrifices—Acceptable Sacrifices—The Rewards of Accepted Sacrifices.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—We report one of Pastor Russell's discourses for to-day, from the text, "Sacrifices and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin Thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the Law." — Hebrews 10:8.

Before discussing his text, the Pastor answered the queries of those who ask why he does not preach "fashionable" sermons—digests of leading magazine articles, dissertations on scientific progress, parks, better housing for the poor, discourses on temperance, the social evil, etc. His reply is that he has a different ordination, which reads, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek."

The Master and the Apostles set the standard which he believes should be followed. He follows their example, not considering himself wise enough to improve upon their methods. Jesus' preaching was along the simplest doctrinal lines, because none of His hearers were begotten of the Holy Spirit. The Divine thought is expressed that beginners in the Christian way should "desire the sincere milk of the Word," whereas advanced Christians should feed upon strong meat. Nothing else can satisfy souls hungering and thirsting after righteousness.

Unrequired and Undesirable Sacrifices

The Pastor then discussed his text. St. Paul is quoting from the fortieth Psalm. Through the Prophet David God declared that the sacrifices of the Law, which could never really cancel sin, were not to His pleasure. Christ is here represented as noting that the typical sacrifices could not remove sin, but that His own body had been especially prepared as a Sin-offering, to provide the better sacrifice necessary to redeem Adam and his race.

Further, we read of the Master's consecration at thirty years of age. Everything written in the Law and in the Prophets respecting the bearing of the penalty of Adam's sin by a Saviour, Jesus pledged Himself to carry out. "Then said I, Lo, I come to do Thy will, O God."

The Pastor then showed that St. Paul points out that the unacceptable sacrifices were those of the Law; and that when Jesus offered Himself as the antitypical sacrifice, it meant the taking away of the first, or typical, to put into their place the antitypical.

"Better Sacrifices"—Plural.

Pastor Russell reminded his hearers that the Atonement Day sacrifices were plural, and that the Apostle speaks of "better sacrifices than these." This same lesson he declared

CATTLE MARKETSUNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards yesterday were large—285 cars, comprising 6,000 cattle, 530 hogs, 2,559 sheep and lambs, 379 calves and 10 horses.

Exporters.

There were no cattle bought for export, but there were a few lots of export weight and quality sold at $7.50 to $7.75.

Butchers.

There was a scarcity of good to choice butchers' steers and heifers—not enough to supply the demand. Choice butchers' sold at $7.25 to $7.50; choice butchers' heifers at $7 to $7.35; good steers, $6.75 to $7.25; medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $5.50 to $6; choice cows, $5.75 to $6.50; good cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium cows, $4.50 to $5; common cappers and cutters, $3 to $4.50; export bulls, $5 to $5.50; bologna bulls, $4 to $4.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was an excellent demand for stockers and feeders, as there were many buyers. Steers, 1,000 to 1,150 lbs., sold at $6.30 to $6.60; steers, 900 to 1,000 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 500 to 800 lbs., at $5.25 to $6; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Good milkers and forward springers are in demand. Late springers are not wanted. Prices for cows ranged from $50 to $94 each, the bulk going between $60 and $75.

Veal Calves.

The market for veal calves held steady, as follows: Choice calves sold from $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common, $5.50 to $6.50; rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

The market for sheep was steady; ewes sold at $4.25 to $5.25; rams, $2.75 to $3.50; lambs were lower, selling at $7.25 to $7.50; bucks 75c per head less.

and entored, and the wholesale regeneration of human society is to be brought about.

They will admit that the old-time method of individual regeneration by means of a change of heart, is good to a degree, but altogether too slow for the present age, when the great need is to secure Christian government and establish Christian states.

The chief program is that it is contrary to Scripture and to the mind of God.

Jesus Christ never commissioned His Church to save the world by means of "Christian citizenship." The great Gospel commission says nothing about reforming governments and saving kingdoms, but only about preaching the gospel of salvation by faith.

The Bible says nothing about salvation by the ballot, but it does say much about salvation by the cross of Christ.

The Bible, nowhere says, that the saints are to outvote the sinners and thus effect the world's salvation, but it does say that true Christians are the salt of the earth.

If there had been ten righteous men in Sodom, God would not have destroyed the city. It is not necessary that the salt should even approximate in quantity the bulk of the substance which it preserves.

But it is necessary that the salt should not lose its preserving quality. If the Christian church becomes like the world, then it is no longer the salt of the earth, and can no longer act as preservative. It can no longer save the world from the judgment of an offended God.

For this reason God has always manifested more concern over the condition of his church than over the condition of the world. If his church is what he wants it to be, God can work through it with almighty power for the conversion of the world.

All God wants is the free chance to manifest himself to the world through his church. But if the church becomes corrupt or refuses to be a channel of divine light, God is given no opportunity to manifest his saving power either to the church or to the world. The salt has then lost its savor, the world its only light. This is the worst possible condition that could arise.

The greatest danger, therefore, is not that the world may do wickedly, but that the Christian church may lose its Christianity.

The danger, in other words, is not from the crimes of the wicked, but from the sins of the good: not from the deeds that shock society, but from the respectable sins that because of their popularity find easy entrance into the church and there perform their deadly work of damnation.

The danger is not from what the publicans and sinners may do outside the church, but from what the Pharisees and Scribes may do within the church; not from the work of the saloon-keeper and the corrupt politician, but from the worldliness of church members in good standing.

Jesus Christ, when he was upon earth, made no move to reform the cities, but he did cleanse the temple of God. Is it not possible, nay even probable, that, were he on earth today, he would show more concern for the purifying of the churches than for the reforming of the cities and the setting up of christian states?

Let the cities be cleansed, by all means. Let the saloons be driven out, let philanthropic men be put in office, and just laws be made and administered. But let it be remembered that it was the mission of Jesus Christ, and therefore that it is to-day the mission of his church to save people from sin, and that not from other people's sins, but from their own sins.

the taking away of the first, or typical, to put into their place the antitypical.

"Better Sacrifices"—Plural.

Pastor Russell reminded his hearers that the Atonement Day sacrifices were plural, and that the Apostle speaks of "better sacrifices than these." This same lesson he declared to be set forth elsewhere in Scripture; namely, that from the beginning it had been the Divine purpose that our Lord should have associates that would pass through similar experiences of suffering, and afterwards be associates with him in glory.

The Pastor cited many Scriptural proofs of this assertion. Christ is styled "the Captain of our salvation," "the Bridegroom," "the High Priest of our profession," etc. The Church are under priests, now sacrificing, preparing as He did, for the glorious future work. These priests St. Peter styles a Royal Priesthood, because they will have kingly power combined with priestly service.

Holy and Acceptable Sacrifices.

Pastor Russell next explained why Israel's Atonement Day sacrifices were merely types. The Law read, "A man's life for a man's life." Hence a bullock and a goat could never be acceptable to God as a substitutionary sacrifice for Adam and his family.

Then the Pastor demonstrated that God prepared Jesus with an acceptable body; at our Lord "offered up Himself" an acceptable sacrifice. Divine acceptance was signified:

(1) At Jesus' consecration, by the impartation of the Holy Spirit;

(2) By Jesus' resurrection, born of the Spirit to the Divine nature, glory and immortality.

Our Lord's was the acceptable Sacrifice, yet it was not all that God had typed, said the Pastor. As in the Atonement Day sacrifices there was an offering of a bullock, representing Jesus' death, so there was a subsequent offering of a goat, typifying the Church's sacrifice. See Hebrews 13:11-13.

Jesus' sacrifice continued during the three and a half years of His ministry, and ended with His death. Forty days after, He ascended on High. Then He made application of the merit of His sacrifice on behalf of all who desire to become His footstep followers.

Those in the upper room at Pentecost were the first to be begotten of the Holy Spirit, and to become acceptable sacrifices. Since then, others have been received from every nation. Soon the foreordained number of such sacrificers, or priests, will have completed the Body of Christ beyond the veil. Forthwith the Messianic Kingdom will be established for the blessing of all mankind. During this Gospel Age a special dispensation operates, by which the Church have their deficiencies covered by Christ's merit, thus making them acceptable sacrificers.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market 3400 cattle, 3500 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 700 calves were offered for sale, this morning.

Butchers' stock was stronger and prices advanced 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, this being attributed to the continued small supplies of good stock coming forward. Common stock was in good demand, and prices were higher. Common stockers sold at $5.50 to $5.75; common bulls at $4 to $4.50, and canning cows at $3.25 to $3.50 per 100 pounds. There was also a good demand from local packers for canning stock, and they secured quite a number at the above prices. Supplies of good to choice steers were none too plentiful. Really choice sold at from $7.40 to $7.50 and picked lots at $7.75; while car lots of good stock brought $6.65 to $6.85 and picked lots at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

There were no new developments in the market for small meats, prices for all lines being firmly maintained under a good demand and as supplies were fairly large an active trade was done. Western lambs sold at $6.75 to $7, and sheep at $4.25 to $4.50 per 100 pounds. A good trade continues to be done in grass fed calves for shipment to the United States, and the market in this respect is active with prices firm at 34c to 44c, and local butchers are paying 61c to 73c for milk fed per pound.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.40 to $7.75; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.50; cannars, $3.25 to $4.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6 to $6.25; do., medium, $5 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5 to $6; feeding steers, $5.50 to $5.75; milkers, choice, each, $5 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $75 to $90; springers, $65 to $70; sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; bucks and culs, $3.75 to $4; lambs, $6.25 to $7; hogs, t.o.b., $9.50 to $10; calves, $5 to $20.

BOILED COFFEE OF BRAZIL

The Real Thing as the Natives Make and Drink It.

The Brazilian amid the marble splendors of his New York hotel sipped the tiny cup of black coffee that was to cost him 25 cents.

"This isn't bad," he said, "but it isn't like the coffee we drink on my father's coffee plantation in Brazil."

"There, when a coffee craving seizes you, you take a few handfuls of green coffee berries, and after rejecting all the imperfect ones among them you place these picked berries in an iron ladle and roast them over an open fire.

"You roast them till they begin to smoke. Then before they are charred you take them off, drop them into a mortar and pound them with a pestle carefully.

"Meanwhile a cup of cold pure water has been set on the fire. When it comes to a boil the ground coffee is thrown into it—a tablespoonful to a cup—and the boiling is allowed to go on for about three minutes.

"Now you drink the coffee. You drink it without straining it. The grounds lie at the bottom of the cup, and if you don't shake it the fluid is as clear as crystal—crystal clear, black, fragrant.

"The French can boast as they please of their filtered coffee. I tell you there's nothing like the boiled coffee of Brazil, all picked, roasted and prepared within a few minutes under the open sky."—New York Tribune.

As Koreans Shop.
Shopping in Korea is a very grave and solemn task and occupies the master of the house the greater part of the day. In the market here he purchases his provisions, cooking utensils, linen suits, hats, sandals, tobacco, and the native drink, a liquor obtained from fermented rice. Only one article of the same kind is purchased from a single store. It would be an offense against Korean etiquette to buy a dozen at a time, as this would deplete the stock too quickly and give the shopkeeper the trouble and work of restocking before he was ready! It will therefore be seen that wholesale orders are not welcomed in this odd country; "little and often" appears to be the Golden Rule in buying.—Wide World Magazine.

W. M. S. CONVENTION

"What should the W. M. S. give to the world" was the theme of a very interesting and suggestive paper given by Mrs. L. P. Wells, Tamworth.

"The object of the W. M. S.," she said, "is to aid the church in its work, engaging the efforts of Christian women in the evangelization of heathen women and children, to sustain women missionaries, teachers and other laborers in foreign or home fields and to raise funds for the work of this Society. The way to attain this object is through education, and the W. M. S. is the ideal educational society of the church. It is the educational centre. Mission Study is the key to missionary interest. It helps us to reach intelligent conclusions regarding the world's needs. It creates a desire for personal missionary service. It compels recognition of personal responsibility for the world's evangelization.

We must begin by first giving ourselves to Christ, for not until then will our efforts for others avail.

We must give our talents. In that day when we shall all see face to face and know as we are known, one of the greatest surprises will be the vast amount of undeveloped talent disclosed in ourselves and others.

We must consecrate our money. Every W. M. S. member could tithe her pocket book. The church must be educated in proportionate and systematic giving. Never stop until every man, woman and child is won to this system—Tithe givers are always the best supporters in every department of church work.

We must pray. One woman said, "Pray, pray and help to answer your own prayer." If we have stated times to "eat" why not also have stated times to pray.

Prayer is what the church needs today more than anything if it is to accomplish its divine mission in the world. We should work and pray as though there was not another soul on earth to carry this message of salvation to the billions who dwell in darkness."

This in part, is what the W. M. S. should give to the world.

Mrs. W. E. Powell, a member of Enterprise Auxiliary, delighted everyone with her sweetly rendered solo.

A series of questions for discussion followed, throwing much needed light on many difficult phases of W. M. S. work.

Mrs. Chant led the discussion on "How to get leaders for the Mission Band. She said the best way was just to choose the Auxiliary member who seemed best fitted for the work and elect her as Band leader.

Mrs. J. W. Wagar, Centreville, believed that leaders for Band and Circle should be trained for this special work in every auxiliary.

Mrs. Grange thought that with the Palm Branch no leader, however inexperienced, should be at a loss for good programs.

Miss Paul Newburgh, suggested for the benefit of those who believed themselves incapable of leading a Band, that they might assist the leader by little gifts of literature and in many other ways.

Miss H. Wagar, assistant leader of the largest band in the district, said it was not a difficult thing to lead a Mission Band. That any amount of first class literature was available for programs, and that the work was largely a matter of "will." She advised a Swastika Club, or similar class for training girls as leaders of Bands and Circles. Pointing her remarks by referring to the Enterprise Band with its 143 annual and seven life members.

ONTARIO POLITICS

It is evident that the Whitney Government is in great difficulties owing to Bilingual school question. Mr. Rowell, in a statement issued in reply to Hon. Mr. Lucas claims that the root of the trouble is the Government's lack of any stable policy or conviction on the question and their wobbling attitude throughout. The Liberal Leader gave emphatic denial to Mr. Lucas' insinuation that he (Mr. Rowell) was behind the agitation being carried on by the Ottawa Separate School Board. "I have no communication, he said, "direct or indirect, with the Ottawa men."

Mr. Rowell pointed out in contrast to the Government's shifting attitude on the Bilingual question that the Liberal policy enunciated when he became leader in 1911 remains unchanged to-day. It is as follows:

"To provide through adequate training schools a sufficient supply of competent teachers, and thus insure under proper regulations that the pupils in every school in the Province shall receive a thorough English education."

"We believe this policy to be right" said Mr. Rowell, "and we stand by it. Mr. Lucas asks whether we will support the Government's policy. I ask, what is the Government's policy?"

Remarkable Memories.

Browning, even in his old age, after a single reading of a book, used to quote page after page as fluently and accurately as if he held the volume in his hand. William Morris used to boast that if every copy of the "Pickwick Papers" was destroyed he could restore them to the world without a word missing; and Gladstone, when once he was unable to find his translation of the first Book of Homer to lend a friend, recited every line of it from memory. When this feat was once mentioned to his great rival, Disraeli, the latter remarked, nonchalantly: "That is quite simple. I could do the same sort of thing myself within an hour." Lord Derby's translation of Homer was handed to him. He retired with it for an hour, and on his return repeated the first book from memory—backwards.

A Good Reason.

It was a red letter day at one of our large schools, and the boys were under examination in "optics." The point under illustration was that, strictly and scientifically speaking, we see not objects, but their images depicted on the retina. The doctor, to make the matter plainer, said to the wag of the class:

"William, did you ever actually see your father?"

Bill promptly replied: "No, sir."

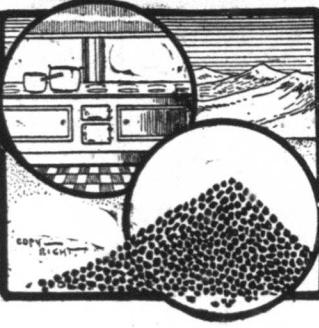

"Please explain why you never saw your own father."

"Because," replied Bill, very gravely, "he died before I was born, sir."—New York American.

The Siege of the Seven Suitors

By

MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson

Presently we climbed a hill that shouldered its way well above its fellows and came out upon a broad ridge, where we entered at once a noble gateway set in an old stone wall and struck off smartly along a fine bit of macadam. The house, the driver informed me, was a quarter of a mile from the gate. The way led through a wild woodland, in which elms and maples predominated, and before this had grown monotonous we came abruptly upon an Italian garden, beyond which rose the house. I knew it at once for one of Pepperton's sound performances. Pepperton is easily our best man in domestic Tudor, and the whole setting of Hopefield Manor—the sunken garden, the superb view, the billowing fields and woodlands beyond—all testified to a taste which no ignorant owner had thwarted. The house was Tudor, but in no servile sense. It was also Pepperton. I lifted my eyes with immediate professional interest to the chimneypots on the roof. It occurred to me on the instant that I had never before been called to retouch any of Pepperton's work. Pep knew as much as I about due construction. I had an immense respect for Pep, and as my specializing in chimneys had been a subject of frequent chaffing between us, I anticipated with a chuckle the pleasure I should have later in telling him that at last one of his flues had required my services.

My good opinion of Miss Hollister did not diminish as I stepped within the broad hall. Houses have their own manner of speech, and Hopefield Manor spoke to all the senses in accents of taste and refinement. A servant took my bag and ushered me into a charming library. A fire smoldered lazily in the great fireplace; there was in the room the faintest scent of burnt wood, but the smoke rose in the flue in a perfectly mannerly fashion, and on thrusting in my hand I felt a good draft of air. I instinctively knelt on the hearth and peered up, but saw nothing unworkmanlike—Pepperton was not a fellow to leave obvious mistakes behind him. But possibly that was not one of the recalcitrant fireplaces I had been called to inspect, and I rose and was continuing my en-bought it of the estate of the gentleman who built it. This will be her first winter here."

Miss Hollister herself appeared. She greeted me without surprise and much as she might have spoken to any guest in her house. I had sometimes been treated as though I were the agent of a decorator's shop, or a delinquent plumber, by the people whom I served, but Miss Hollister and her niece established me upon a plane that was wholly social. I was made to feel that it was the most natural thing in the world for me to be there, having tea, with no business ahead of me but to be agreeable. The fact that I had come to correct the distemper of their flues was utterly negligible. I remembered with satisfaction that I had journeyed from town in a new business suit that made the best of my attenuated figure, and I will not deny that I felt at ease. Miss Hollister talked briskly as she made tea. "It is not necessary for you to take tea if you don't care for it, Mr. Ames," she said, as I rose and handed the first cup to Cecilia. "If you will touch the bell at your elbow you may have liquids of quite another sort."

"You are most generous, Miss Hollister. Tea will suffice for the moment. It is fitting that I should take it here, it having been a weakness for tea as well as curiosity and chance that threw me in your way at the Asolando."

"That absurd—that preposterous hole in the wall!"

She put down her cup and faced me, scowling: "Mr. Ames, I will not deny that it had not been for General Glendinning's cordial indorsement of you, and the further fact that I had met your late father, I should not have invited you to my house on the occasion to which you refer. My contempt for the Asolando and the things it stands for is beyond such language as a lady may use before the young. I fall back upon the privilege of my age to beg that you will hereafter give the Asolando a wide berth."

I laughed at her earnestness, but on turning toward Miss Cecilia I saw that she was placidly stirring her cup. It might be that one was not expected to manifest amusement in Miss Hollister's utterances, and I was anxious to adjust myself to the proper key in my intercourse, no matter how brief it might be, with this remarkable old lady.

In my embarrassment I rose and offered the bread and butter to Cecilia, who declined it. The austerity of her rejection rather unnerved me.

"I assure you, Miss Hollister, that I have no wish to become a habitue of the place," I said. "And yet you will pardon me if I repeat that, but for it, I should not now be enjoying the hospitality of Hopefield Manor."

She lifted her head from her cup and bowed, but I was immediately interested in the fact that her niece was speaking.

"I think Aunt Octavia is hard on the Asolando," she was saying. "Aunt Octavia is interested in the revival of romance, and romance without poetry seems to me wholly impossible."

"The age is decadent, and I know no better way of restoring the race to its ancient vim and energy than by sending men back to the camp and field or to sail the high seas in new armadas. The men of this age have become a lot ner in the gun room tonight."

"Certainly, Aunt Octavia."

Once more I glanced at the girl, hoping that some glimmer in her eyes would set me right and establish a common understanding and sympathy between us, but she was moving out of the room at her aunt's side. The man who had tended the fire met me in the hall and, conducting me to my room, suggested various offices that he was ready to perform for my comfort. The house faced south, and my windows, midway of the east wing, afforded a fine view of the hills. The room was large enough for a chamber of state, and its furniture was massive. A four poster invited to luxurious repose; half a dozen etchings by famous artists—Parrish and Van Elten among them—hung upon the walls.

My bag had been opened and my things put out, so that, there being more than an hour to pass before I need dress for dinner, I went below and explored the garden and wandered off along a winding path that stole with charming furtiveness toward a venerable orchard of gnarled apple trees. From the height thus gained I looked down upon the house, and caught a glimpse beyond it of one of the chain of lakes, on which the western sun glinted goldenly. Thus seeing the house from a new angle I was impressed as I had not been at first by its size. It was a huge establishment, and I thought with envy of Pepperton, to whom such ample commissions were not rare. Pepperton, I recalled a little bitterly, had arrived, whereas I, who had enjoyed exactly his own training for the architect's profession, had failed at it and been obliged to turn my hand to the doctoring of chimneys.

But as I reflected upon the odd circumstances of my being there my spirits rose. Miss Hollister was beyond question a singular person, but her whims were amusing. I felt that she was less cryptic than her niece, and the thought of Cecilia drove me back upon Jewett's story of Wiggins' interest in that quarter. I resolved to write to Wiggins when I got back to town the next day and abuse him roundly for running off without so much as goodbye. That, most emphatically, was not like dear old Wiggins.

CHAPTER IV.

I Fall Into a Brier Patch.

HAD been sitting on a stone wall watching the shadows lengthen. I rose now and followed the wall toward a highway along which wagons and an occasional motorcar had passed during my reverie. The sloping pasture was rough and frequently sent me along at a trot. The wall that marked the boundary at the roadside was hidden by a tangle of raspberry bushes, and my foot, turning on a stone concealed in the wild grasses, I fell clumsily and rolled a dozen yards into a tangle of the berry bushes. As I picked myself up I heard voices in the road, but should have thought nothing of it had I not seen through a break in the vines and almost within reach of my hand Cecilia Hollister talking earnestly to some one not yet disclosed. She was hatless, but had flung a golf cape over her shoulders. The scarlet lining of the hood turned up about her neck made an effective setting for her noble head.

"Oh, I can't tell you! I can't help

"I cannot listen to you. No I'm committed. I cannot bear countenance you at all, and I can plain nothing. I came here to you only to tell you this. You —please! And do not attempt me in this way again."

I was grateful that Wiggins sank so low in his reply that I heard it, but I knew that he was lying hard. Then a motor flash and when the whirl of its passing ceased the voices were inaudible; a moment later I heard a light step beyond the wall, and Cecilia hurriedly, her face turned the house. The cape was drawn about her shoulders, and she stood with her head bowed.

I breathed a sigh of relief, and I felt safe from detection, climbing slope.

Pausing on the crest to survey landscape, I saw a man, wearing a hat and a light topcoat, against a fence that inclosed a field. As I glanced in his direction he away hastily toward the road. The feeling of being watched agreeable, and I could not accost him. As he passed out of sight another man appeared, emerging from a strip of woodland farther on. Through the evening haze I should said that he was a gentleman two men apparently bore no resemblance to each other, though they were in the same direction, bound, I for the highway below. I had comfortable feeling that they had been observing me, though for purpose I could not imagine, once more, just as I was about to leave the Italian garden from a field that hung slightly above the third man appeared as myste as though he had sprung from ground, and ran at a sharp dash along the fence, headed, like the others, for the road. In the third instance the stranger undoubtedly took a hide his face, but he, too, was dressed and wore a topcoat and a duster hat of current style.

I did not know why these gentlemen were ranging the neighborhood or object they had in view, but the general appearances had interested me and I went on into the house wifed that events of an unusual character were likely to mark my the home of Miss Octavia Hollister.

Cecilia sat reading alone when I entered the library shortly before ten o'clock. She put down her book and we fell into fitful talk.

"I took a walk after tea. I feel that sunsets are best seen in the fields. You can't quite do justice from windows," she began.

She seemed preoccupied. She was in her recollection of the landscape—I was confident of this poor Wiggins was even now viewing these hills, no doubt, brooding his troubles under clear October Dinner was announced and Miss Hollister entered, and I went between them. Miss Octavia Hollister was a surprising person, nothing was she so delightfully ward as in the gowns she wore. Ignorance of such matters is it durable, but I fancy that she dressed her own raiment and had her were therupon carried out by a skill. joyment of the beautiful room when I became conscious, by rather curious and mixed processes not wholly of the eye, that a young woman had drawn back the light portieres—they were dark brown, with borders of burnt orange—and stood gravely gazing at me. She held the curtains apart—they made, indeed, a kind of frame for her—but as our eyes met she advanced at once and spoke my name.

"You are Mr. Ames. My aunt expected you. I regret to say that she is not in the house just now, but she will doubtless return for tea. I am her niece. Won't you sit down?"

As she found a seat for herself, I made bold to survey her with some particularity. She carried her fine height with beautiful dignity. She was a creature of grace, and it was a grace of strength, the suppleness and ease that mark our later outdoor American woman. She could do her miles over those hills—I was sure of that. Her fine olive face, crowned with dark hair, verified the impression I had gathered from Jewett, that she was a woman of cultivation. She had read the poets; Dante and Petrarch spoke from her eyes. Cecilia was no bad name for her; she suggested heavenly harmonies! And as for Jewett's story of Wiggins' infatuation, I was content.

She was talking meanwhile of the day and its buoyant air and of the tapestries hung in the woodlands in a voice deep with rare intimations of viol chords.

"It's very quiet here. It doesn't seem possible that we are so near the city. My aunt chose the place with care, and she made no mistake about it. Yes, the house was built by Mr. Pepperton, but not for us. My aunt romance, and romance without poetry seems to me wholly impossible."

"The age is decadent, and I know no better way of restoring the race to its ancient vim and energy than by sending men back to the camp and field or to sail the high seas in new armadas. The men of this age have become a lot of sordid shopkeepers, and to my moral sense the looting of cities is far more honorable than the creation of trusts and the manipulation of prices, though I cannot deny that but for my late father's zeal in destroying his competitors in the baby buggy business we might not now be enjoying the delicate fragrance of caravan tea."

"I assure you, Mr. Ames," said Cecilia, "that the Asolando is a very harmless place, and that as a matter of fact its aims are wholly consonant with those of Aunt Octavia. I myself served there for a time, and those were among the most delightful days of my life. There are times when I miss the Asolando."

"Mr. Ames," began Miss Octavia presently in her crisp, direct fashion, which had the effect of leading me in my anxiety to appear ready with answers to take a flattering view of my own courage and resourcefulness. "Mr. Ames, are you equal to the feat of swimming a moat under a shattering fire from the castle?"

"I have every reason to think I am, Miss Hollister," I replied modestly.

"And if a white hand waved to you from the gridded window of the lonely tower, would you ride on indifferently or pause and thunder at the gate?"

"White hands have never waved to me, save occasionally when I have gone a-riding in the Sixth avenue elevated, but it is my honest belief that my sword would promptly leave its scabbard if the hand ever waved from the ivied tower."

My friends at the Hare and Tortoise would have heard this avowal with some surprise, for no man's life had ever been tamer than mine. I am by nature timid, and fall but a little short of being afraid of the dark. Prayers for deliverance from battle, murder and sudden death cannot be too strongly expressed for me. My answer had however pleased Miss Octavia, and she clapped her hands with pleasure.

"Cecilia," she cried, "something told me that afternoon at the Asolando that my belief in the potential seven was not ill placed, and now you see that it introducing myself to Mr. Ames at the seventh table from the door, in the seventh shop from Fifth avenue. I waited to a meeting with a gentleman I had been predestined to know."

As we talked further a servant appeared and laid fresh logs across the still smoldering fire. This I thought would suggest to Miss Hollister the professional character of my visit, but the fire kindled readily, the smoke rose freely in the hue, and Miss Hollister paid no attention to it. The merits of chain armor, I think it was, that held us for half an hour, Cecilia and I listening with respect to what, in my ignorance, seemed a remarkable fund of knowledge on this recondite subject.

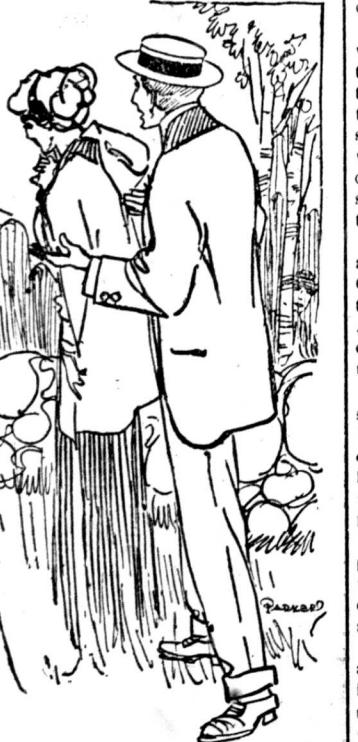

"We dine at 7, Mr. Ames, and you may amuse yourself as you like until that hour. Cecilia, you may order din-

"Oh, I can't tell you! I can't help you! I mustn't even appear to give you any advantage. I went into it with my eyes open, and I'm in honor bound not to tell you anything. You have said nothing—nothing, remember that. There is absolutely nothing between us."

"But I must say everything. I refuse to be blinded by these absurd restrictions, whatever they are. It's not fair. It's inviting me into a game where the cards are not all on the table. I've come to make an end of it!"

My hands had suffered by contact with the briars, and I had been ministering to them with my handkerchief, but I fell back upon the slope in my astonishment at this colloquy. Cecilia Hollister I had seen plainly enough, though the man's back had been toward me, but anywhere on earth I should have known Wiggins' voice. I protest that it is not my way to become an eavesdropper voluntarily, but to disclose myself now was impossible. If it had not been Wiggins—but Wiggins would never have understood or forgiven, nor could I have explained plausibly to Cecilia Hollister that I had not followed her from the house to spy upon her. I should have made the noise of an invading army if I had attempted to effect an exit by creeping out through the window of crisp leaves in which I lay, and to turn back and ascend the slope the way I had come would have been to advertise my presence to the figures in the road.

"You must go—please!"

There seemed nothing for me but to keep still and hope that this discussion between Cecilia Hollister and Hartley Wiggins would not be continued within earshot. To my relief they moved a trifle farther on, but I still heard their voices.

nothing was she so delightfully ward as in the gowns she wore. Ignorance of such matters isurable, but I fancy that she d her own raiment and had he were thereupon carried out by skill. At the Asolando, and w had met at tea in her own hot had worn the severest of gowns, with short skirt and into whose pockets she was thrusting her hands. Tonight terial was lavender silk trim white, but the skirt had not length and over a white silk waist sl a kind of cutaway cut that i the skirt. An aigrette in her white hair contributed a pique to the whole impression. As w ed down the hall she talked wit animation of The Hague tributary holding a prominent place newspapers for some reason t escaped me.

"The whole thing is absurd, ly absurd. I know of nothing would contribute more to humankind than a real war between many and England. The Hag is pure sentimentalism—if sentiment can ever be said to be pure go further and say that I can positively immoral."

She had ordered dinner in the room, but I thought this merely of her humor, and I was taken when she led the way into a lowly raftered room, where electric of an odd type were thrust at intervals along the walls, while otherwise hung with arms of sorts in orderly combinations. were not the litter of antique I saw in a hasty glance, but rifle guns of the latest patterns, and the sideboard stood a gun rail cabinet which I assumed contained other and perhaps deadlier weapons.

But for the presence of Miss who was essentially typical twentieth century American we think I might readily have the illusion that I was the g some eccentric chateauinee who invited me to dine with her in a her fortress before ordering some chamber of horrors for me.

No reference was made to theacter of the room. I felt, in fact, Cecilia rather pleaded with him that I should make no reference. And Miss Hollister remarked casually as though in comment my thoughts:

"Consistency has buried its sands and habit its tens of thousands. We should live, Mr. Ames, changes and chances of this life. Between an opera box villa at Newport many of n friends have perished."

Then with startling abruptness put down her fork and, bend wonderfully direct gaze upon me, asked a question that caused me to gle on a bit of asparagus.

"I imagine, Mr. Ames, that a member of some of the better in town. If by any chance you go to the Hare and Tortoise—the restaurant which has always pleased me by any chance happen to enjoy acquaintance of Hartley Wiggins."

Cecilia lifted her head. I saw she had been as startled as I was. I thought that a denial acquaintance with Wiggins might serve him in the circumstance I am not, I hope, without a shadow, and I responded promptly.

"Yes, I know him well. We not listen to you. Now that I committed I cannot honorably excuse you at all, and I can say nothing. I came here to meet you to tell you this. You must go! And do not attempt to see his way again."

I was grateful that Wiggins' voice was low in his reply that I did not but I knew that he was pleading. Then a motor flashed by, and the whirr of its passing had the voices were inaudible. But later I heard a light, quick sound the wall, and Cecilia passed, her face turned toward me. The cane was drawn tightly over her shoulders, and she walked her head bowed.

I uttered a sigh of relief, and when safe from detection, climbed the steps on the crest to survey the scene, I saw a man, wearing a dark coat and a light topcoat, leaning against a fence that inclosed a pasture. In his direction he moved hastily toward the road below. The feeling of being watched is not new, and I could not account for it as he passed out of sight still a man appeared, emerging from a wood farther on. Even the evening haze I should have known he was a gentleman. The man apparently bore no relation to her, though they were walking the same direction, bound, I judged, highway below. I had an unusual feeling that they had both been serving me, though for what

I could not imagine. Then more, just as I was about to enter the Italian garden from a fallow field, hung slightly above it, a man appeared as mysteriously as he had sprung from the earth and ran at a sharp dog trot past the fence, headed like the other toward the road. In the third instance he undoubtedly took pains to save his face, but he, too, was well and wore a topcoat and a fete of current style.

I do not know why these gentlemen entered the neighborhood or what they had in view, but their appearances had interested me, sent on into the house well satisfied events of an unusual character likely to mark my visit to the home of Miss Octavia Hollister.

I sat reading alone when I entered the library shortly before the dinner hour. She put down her book and into fitful talk.

After tea, I always take walks after tea. I always take sunsets are best seen from the window. You can't quite do them from windows," she began.

Wiggins seemed preoccupied. His recollection of the glowing fire—I was confident of this, and Higgins was even now wandering the hills, no doubt, brooding upon bales under clear October stars. It was announced the moment Hollister entered, and I walked up to her. Miss Octavia Hollister is a surprising person, but in her was she so delightfully gay in the gowns she wore. My knowledge of such matters is immense, but I fancy that she designed a garment and had her ideas carried out by a tailor.

At the Asolando, and when we sat tea in her own house, she was the expert of tailored friends. I always see a good deal of him during the winter. His summers are spent usually on his ranch in the west. We dined together two days ago at the Hare and Tortoise, just before he left for the west."

"You will pardon me if I say that it is wholly to his credit that he has forsaken the professions and identified himself with the honorable calling of the husbandman."

"We met Mr. Wiggins while traveling abroad last summer," interposed Cecilia, meeting my eyes quite frankly.

"Met him! Did you say met him, Cecilia? On the contrary, we found him waiting for us at the dock the morning we sailed," corrected Miss Hollister, "and we never lost him a day in three months of rapid travel. I had never met him before, but I cannot deny that he made himself exceedingly agreeable. If, as I suspected, he had deliberately planned to travel on the same steamer with my two nieces, I have only praise for his conduct, for in these days, Mr. Ames, it warms my heart to find young men showing something of the old chivalric ardor in their affairs of the heart."

"I'm sure Mr. Wiggins made himself very agreeable," remarked Cecilia colorlessly.

"For myself," retorted Miss Hollister, "I should speak even more strongly. He repeatedly served us with tact and delicacy. I had formed so high an opinion of Mr. Wiggins that I learned with sincerest regret that his ancestors were Tories and took no part in the struggle for American independence. There are times when I seriously question the wisdom of the colonists in breaking with the mother country, but certainly no man of character in that day could have hesitated as to his proper course."

Then, as though by intention, Miss Hollister dropped upon the smooth current of our talk a sentence that drove the color from Cecilia's face.

"Hezekiah and Mr. Wiggins were the best of friends," was Miss Hollister's remark.

Cecilia's eyes were on her plate, but her aunt went on in her blithest fashion:

"You may not know that Hezekiah is another niece, Cecilia's sister. She was named, at my suggestion, for my father, there being no son in the family, and I trust that so unusual a name in a young girl does not strike you as indefensible."

"On the contrary, it seems to me wholly refreshing and delightful. As I recall the Sunday school of my youth, Hezekiah was a monarch of great authority, whose animosity toward Sennacherib was justified in the fullest degree. The very name bristles with spears and is musical with the trumpets of Israel. Nothing would make me happier than to meet the young lady who bears this illustrious name."

"As to your knowledge of ancient history, Mr. Ames," began Miss Hollister as she helped herself to the cheese—sweets, I noted, were not included in the very ample meal I had enjoyed—"it is clear that you were well taught in your youth. I am not surprised, however, for I should have expected nothing less of a son of the late General Ames of Hartford. As to meeting my niece Hezekiah, I fear that that is at present impossible. While Cecilia remains with me Hezekiah's duty is to her father, and I must say

CHAPTER V.

The Strange Behavior of a Chimney.

HERE was no reason in the world why Hartley Wiggins should not call upon two ladies living in Westchester county, and I must say that he appeared to advantage in Miss Hollister's library.

He had got into his evening clothes somewhere, perhaps at a neighboring inn or maybe at the house of a friend, for he could not possibly have motored into town and back since his interview with Cecilia in the highway. He had impressed the clerk at the Hare and Tortoise with the idea that he had left New York for a long absence, and he had apparently camped at the gates of Hopefield to be near Cecilia.

When he had paid his compliments to the ladies he turned to me with an almost imperceptible lifting of the brows, but he was cordial enough. It was surprised or disappointed at seeing me his manner did not betray the feeling.

"Glad to see you, Ames. Rather nice weather this."

"Even Da— couldn't do better," I affirmed with a grin, but he ignored the fling.

Cecilia stood restlessly, and I felt decided ill at ease. Miss Hollister crossed to the fireplace and poked the logs.

Just what part Hezekiah Hollister played in the situation was beyond me. If I had not witnessed Wiggins' clandestine meeting with Cecilia matters would have been clearer to my comprehension, but his appearance at the house after the colloquy I had overheard from the brier patch was in itself inexplicable. Miss Hollister's singular references to Hezekiah—a person about whom my curiosity was now a good deal aroused—added to the mystery that infolded the library.

Responsive to Miss Hollister's energetic prodding, the flames in the fireplace leaped into the great throat of the chimney with a roar. She turned her back to the blaze, and looked upon her guests benignantly.

"If all your flues draw like that one they are not seriously in need of doctoring," I remarked.

"Flues are nothing if not erratic," replied Miss Hollister. The subject did not appear to interest her, nor had she, by the remotest suggestion, referred to the object of my coming. I had sniffed vainly in the halls above and

"And if you knew Mr. Ames' game I'm sure you wouldn't care to waste time on him," piped Wiggins, whom I had frequently vanquished in billiard bouts at the Hare and Tortoise, where, I may say modestly, I had long been considered one of the most formidable of the club's players.

Both he and Cecilia had risen, and we stood, I remember, just before the hearth during this exchange. At this moment a singular thing happened. The fire that had been sweeping in a broad wavelike curve into the chimney was checked suddenly. I had repeatedly remarked the admirable draft, the facile grace of the flame as it rose and vanished. The cessation of the draft was unmarked by any of those premonitory symptoms by which a fire usually gives warning of evil intentions. The upward current of air had ceased utterly and without apparent cause. We were all aware of a choking, a gasping in the deep flue, which could not be accounted for by any natural stoppage incident to chimneys—the dislodging of masonry or a packing of soot. The former was hardly possible as the house was not old

As to meeting my niece Hezekiah, I fear that that is at present impossible. While Cecilia remains with me Hezekiah's duty is to her father, and I must say in all kindness that Hezekiah's ways, like those of Providence and the cus- tom house, are beyond my feeble un- derstanding. In a word, Mr. Ames, Hezekiah is different."

"Hezekiah," added Cecilia, with feeling, "is a dear."

"Please don't bring sentimentalism to the table!" cried Miss Hollister. "Mr. Wiggins once informed me in a moment of forgetfulness—it was at Fontainebleau, I remember, when Hezekiah persisted in reminding a one armed French colonel who was hang- ing about that we named cities in America for Bismarck—it was there at the inn that Mr. Wiggins confided to me his belief that Hezekiah bears a strong resemblance to the common or domestic peach. As a single peach at that place was charged in the bill at 10 francs, the remark was ill timed, to say the least. But Mr. Wiggins was so contrite when I rebuked him that I allowed him to pay for our luncheon—no small matter, indeed, for Heze- kiah's appetite is nothing if not robust."

Miss Hollister gave so many turns to the conversation that I could reach no conclusion as to her feeling toward Wiggins or Hezekiah Hollister, and, as for Cecilia, I was unable to determine whether she was a prisoner at Hope- field Manor or the willing and devoted companion of her aunt.

In this bewildered state of mind, while we lingered over our coffee, the servant appeared with a card for each of the ladies. I saw Cecilia start as she read the name.

"Mr. Wiggins! How remarkable that he should have appeared just as we were speaking of him!" said Miss Hol-

"If all your flues draw like that one they are not seriously in need of doc- toring," I remarked.

"Flues are nothing if not erratic," replied Miss Hollister. The subject did not appear to interest her, nor had she, by the remotest suggestion, referred to the object of my coming. I had sniffed vainly in the halls above and below for any trace of the stale smoke which usually greeted me at once on my arrival at the house of a client. "The house was built, you may not know, for a manufacturer of umbrel- las, who died before he had occupied it, in circumstances I may later disclose to you, which accounts, Mr. Ames, for that figure of Cupid under a pink parasol on the drawing room ceiling. At the first opportunity I shall remove it, as baby Cupids are irreconcilable with the militant love-making I admire. I consider umbrel- las detestable and never carry one when I can command a mackintosh."

"When I'm on the ranch I wear a slicker," said Wiggins. "It's bullet proof, and that I have found at times a dea'l advantage."

We discussed mackintoshes for at least ten minutes with far more sprightliness than I had imagined the subject could evoke. Then Miss Hollister, after a turn up and down the room, paused beside me.

"Mr. Ames," s'is said, "would you care to join me in a game of billiards?

I'm not in my best form, but I think we might profitably knock the balls for half an hour."

I acquiesced with alacrity. I assumed it to be Miss Hollister's purpose to leave Cecilia and Wiggins alone. I should be rendering Wiggins and Ce- cilia a service by withdrawing, and I was glad of a chance to escape.

To my infinite surprise they both protested, not in mere polite murmurs, but with considerable vehemence.

"It's quite cool tonight, and I don't believe you ought to use the billiard room until the plumber has fixed the radiator," said Cecilia.

had ceased utterly and without appar- ent cause. We were all aware of a chok- ing, a gasping in the deep flue, which could not be accounted for by any nat- ural stoppage incident to chimneys—the dislodging of masonry or a pack- ing of soot. The former was hardly possible as the house was not old enough to make the latter theory plausible. From my survey of the flue on my arrival in the afternoon I judged that this particular chimney had been little used.

The smoke now rolled out in billows and drove us back from the hearth. I seized the tongs and poker and began readjusting the logs, without, how- ever, any hope of correcting a diffi- culty that lay patently in the upper regions of the flue itself. The smoke, after a courageous effort to rise, encountered an obstruction of some sort and ebbed back upon the hearth and out into the room. My efforts to stop the trouble by shifting the logs were futile, as I expected them to be, and I retreated quickly, making, I fear, no very gallant appearance as I mopped my face and eyes.

"Well," exclaimed Miss Hollister, who had rung for a servant to open the doors and windows, "this is cer- tainly most extraordinary. What sol- lution do you offer, Mr. Ames?"

"The matter requires investigation. I can't venture an opinion until I have made a thorough investigation. The night is perfectly quiet, and the wind is hardly responsible. I think we had better abandon the room until I can solve this riddle in the morn- ing."

The prompt opening of the windows and doors caused the slow dispersion of the smoke, but the lights in the room still shone dimly as through a fog.

The Girl From the Effete East

By ARTHUR DENSMORE

BARRINGTON was completing his first year of practice when Theodore Tuppennheim arrived in Knuckleville. Mr. Tuppennheim was selling stock in the Charitable Gold Mining company at 5 cents per share, price to advance to 10 cents at the end of thirty days. Incidentally he found time to foster in Barrington's bosom the spirit of discontent which ten months' fruitless waiting for clients had engendered. If he were a clever, clean cut young man like Barrington, did Barrington know what he'd do? Move west. He wouldn't fritter away his time in a mossbacked New England hamlet where people looked down on a fellow just because they'd known him all his life and could remember when he was a little shaver and went with patches on his trousers. No, sir. He'd just gather together his earthly possessions and take the first train for Gilt Gulch, Nev. There was the coming town; there lay the opportunity for an able young man to rise. No reason in the world why he should not be in the United States senate within five years. That would be coming some? Well, everybody and everything came some in that country. Why, sir, where the thriving city of Gilt Gulch now stood there had been less than two years since naught but sagebrush and alkali. And now look at it—just look at it! Six thousand inhabitants and more coming by every train! Simply couldn't get houses up fast enough for 'em. Had to camp out in tents. And every blamed one of 'em making money. Why, sir, you couldn't find a bootblack in Gilt Gulch who was worth less than fifty thousand!

This vision of wealth and political prominence was quite too much for Barrington. He adjusted his affairs in Knuckleville, which was no very difficult matter, took tearful leave of numerous relatives and of a certain pretty damsel, who was not yet a relative, but had rashly promised to become one whenever Barrington's income should suffice for the support of two persons, and bled himself to Gilt Gulch, promising to send souvenir postcards from every municipality he passed through on the way.

Now, underneath the lurid exaggeration with which Mr. Theodore Tuppennheim had clothed his narrative of the rise of Gilt Gulch there lay a respectable substratum of truth, and the combination of Barrington's ingenuous appearance with certain letters of introduction to persons financially prominent in Gilt Gulch, which Mr. Tuppennheim procured for him, resulted in his speedily establishing a thriving practice. For the most part it was work in connection with the location of mining claims, and, besides numerous fees in cash, Barrington acquired several claims of his own, which he disposed of profitably.

In brief, at the end of a year Barrington had waxed so prosperous as to feel himself warranted in marrying. The Knuckleville Weekly Times announced editorially that it understood that young Mr. Barrington, for whom its readers would remember, the Times had predicted a brilliant career when he hung out his shingle in Knuckleville, was now one of the leading men in the west, and the other village maidens were openly jealous of Susie Cutler, whose good fortune it was to be to marry a millionaire.

But Susie herself had no illusions. She even refused to permit Barrington to come east for the marriage. Her childhood lessons of thrift and economy had taken deep root in her mind, and she would not, she said, have the price of a round trip railroad ticket thrown away. If Barrington felt that he must spend the money, let him buy a cabinet organ or a secondhand piano for the front parlor. They would be married in their own house at Gilt Gulch and after that take a little wedding trip to Colorado Springs or maybe Denver. Perhaps, being a prudent damsel, Susie desired to have a glance at Gilt Gulch before she committed herself irrevocably. At any rate, matters had been thus arranged, and, the date set for the wedding being but two days away and Susie due to arrive that afternoon, Barrington was in the state of ecstasy appropriate to such circumstances. It was in this moment of supreme happiness that misfortune befell him.

The work Barrington had been doing requires to be performed with great accuracy; otherwise it is not only valueless, but may be the occasion of great loss to the client. Now, it is possible that Barrington possessed genius. People who have that, you know, are apt to be careless as to details. Perhaps it was merely that, being deeply in love, he could not concentrate his mind upon his work. However that may be, Hartford, the attorney whose office was next to Barrington's, had discovered in the course of an investigation of the records that Barrington had filed documents containing serious errors. He spoke to back and reduce the membership of the Gilt Gulch bar by one."

It is significant of Hartford's broad and tolerant temperament that he did not remind Barrington that he had previously predicted such a catastrophe as had now befallen. Nevertheless a slight glimmer of amusement stole across his face.

"So you want my advice, do you?" he asked.

"I should appreciate it very much," said Barrington.

"Well, you shall have it," said Hartford laconically, rapping the bowl of his pipe against the heel of his shoe. "If Jim Busby were out gunning for me and I couldn't shoot any better than you can, and I had a comfortable little sum saved, as you have, and there were a pretty girl in New England who didn't know any better than to love me, as she does you, I'd go east on the half past 2 train, and I wouldn't hurry back."

"But the trouble is," Barrington explained, "Susie—Miss Cutler, that is—will be here on the train that gets in at 2:50. The trains pass on the first siding out, you know. The fact is we are to be married day after tomorrow at noon. You'll pardon my omitting to send you an invitation, won't you? It was quite unintentional. I've been so busy!"

"Oh," Hartford broke in, with a deprecating wave of his arm, "you need not apologize. It's just one of those little mistakes a busy man is bound to make every now and then. I haven't Busby's disposition. I'll forgive you."

Then Hartford looked at his watch and found that it was twenty minutes past 2.

"You'll have to move lively, my boy," he said. "Keep an eye open for Jim, and if the coast is clear take the 2:30. If it isn't, walk over to Sand City and take the next one there."

"But about Susie," Barrington remonstrated.

"Pshaw!" growled Hartford. "That's easy enough. Leave a note for her with the station master, telling her to go back to Colorado Springs and you'll meet her there. If you don't have time to write a note, have the station master tell her you've been called away on a life and death matter and that she's to go to the hotel and wait until you send her word. Don't you worry about the girl. She'll prefer a slightly delayed wedding to an expedited funeral. Hurry up now. You've just about time to make it."

As he slipped down the main street of Gilt Gulch on his way to the station Barrington caught a glimpse of Jim Busby's gaunt profile as he stood at the bar of the Jolly Dog, his back toward the entrance. Barrington's indolent heart rejoiced as he reflected that the ten mile walk to Sand City would now be unnecessary. It was just twenty-eight minutes past 2 when he reached the station. He gave the necessary instructions concerning Susie to the station master and rushed out upon the platform. But the train which made up at Gilt Gulch was not yet ready to depart. A freight car had left the rails, blocking the track. Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, and still the obstruction remained. Barrington grew uneasy. Jim Busby might at any moment deem that he had imbibed a quantity of liquor commensurate with his contemplated task and begin to search for him. But at the end of twenty minutes, to his great relief, the departing train crew succeeded in re-

"Then," said Busby. "It's enough to my mind that in intermission with this execution you're preventing me from doing you a great Howsomever, if you stick to you don't want him shot and take him out of Nevada and keep him out!"

The girl did not wait for him to finish. She transferred her grasp of Busby's arm to that of Barr who during the preceding convalescence had stood silent, his face white limbs trembling, cold sweat tainting his forehead.

"Come, Harry," she said imperiously. With bowed head and cast eyes, Barrington suffered lead him aboard the train, which now, the track being clear, at a move eastward.

Jim Busby sat down upon the platform and burst into laughter. Long after the train disappeared around the curve the station master him there, his broad shoulders shaking with merriment.

Senatorial Repartee.

In the senate chamber John J. Ingalls was directing some remarks to Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts. The senator from that state, Mr. Ingalls, having come in while Mr. Ingalls was speaking, thought the words meant for his ear, and so, interposing, he asked Ingalls if he was digressing the remarks at him. The Senator turned slowly around, for Ingalls sat behind him, and then, in a low voice, he said, "I was directing remarks to the successor of Charles Sumner and not to the successor of Elbridge Webster."

The repartee has become traditional, and again the utterance was at once placed side of that reply of Conkling's, which is also traditional in the senate chamber.

Ingalls was speaking, and Thurber said, interrupting him, "Does Senator aim his remarks at me; instantly turns to me?" when Mr. Ingalls, with delicious gravity, bowed to Thurber, with whom he was friendly, said: "When I turn to Senator I turn as the Mussulman to Mecca; I turn as I would turn the common law of England—the most copious fount of jurisprudence."

So it goes on around the ring until all have answered this question according to their belief, when the leader calls out, "Button, button arise," and the button holder stands up. Then if there is any one who guessed that the person who really held the button did not have it he becomes a "ghost" and goes out of the circle. The player who held the button becomes leader, and the game goes on. If no one is caught the game proceeds with only the first leader and the one who held the button changing places.

The "ghost" can only become mortal and again join the circle when they can get some player in the circle to speak to them, and then that mortal must take the ghost's place.—Philadelphia Record.

Stork Legends.

There are many beautiful legends about the stork. In all countries it is considered to be a bird of good omen. In Holland the natives believe that they will have good fortune all the year if a stork alights upon the roof of their cottage in passing.

If storks happen to build near the house the neighbors consider them very fortunate people.

And last, but not least, there is great faith among children in the old legend that the stork brings tiny children from the cloudland, away up there beyond the sunset, down into the garden at home, and when no one is looking lays them softly down within the cradle, fast asleep.—Philadelphia Record.

And to make the shoulders and the armholes feel comfortable is all that is necessary, as an elastic ribbon run through a casing at the lower edge of the waistcoat will draw it smoothly over the bust and back and about the waistline. If the lower two-thirds of the waistcoat's back is of batiste the garment will be firmer and wear better, since that portion of it must stand most of the strain. The fronts may be solidly pin tucked and fastened blindly with hooks and eyes or finely tucked in groups at either side of a row of tiny crystal buttons, while the neck may be finished with either a standing or a turned over collar ajar stitch bordered. The Medici collar illustrated is a dainty adjunct to wear with the tulle waistcoat. It is also made of tulle or wash net trimmed with lace.

A Harmless Bleach.

Peroxide of hydrogen is the best bleaching agency known, for it gives a pure white with positively no chance of hurting the fabric in any way. It may be used for silk, woolen, linen or cotton. Use as follows: One teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen to half a tub of cold water. Allow the articles to soak over night, and after rinsing wash as usual and you will be agreeably surprised at the result. This is almost the same method that the mills use in bleaching their goods from natural color to white before finishing.

Made Use of Her Gowns.

Some divorce agreements have contained the odd stipulation that the wife should be provided with a spring and fall dress suitable to her condition. A case is known where the husband stipulated to pay a certain sum (alimony) every week, but demanded that whenever his wife discarded her gowns for good they should be turned over to him. He was called a "tight-fisted" man by those who mildly disliked him and a "contemptible old miser" by out and out enemies. He resold the gowns to second-hand buyers.

A Broad Hint.

Fred—Last night as you stood in the moonlight I couldn't help but think how much I would like to kiss you.

Freda—Well, the poet says, "The thought of yesterday is the action of to-day."

Pleasant.

"Tommy," said the young man to his prospective brother-in-law, aged five, "will you be sorry when I marry your sister?"

"Yes," answered the little fellow; "I'll be sorry for you."

ing put on in panels surrounded by a border of gray and white. The wood-work is white enamel and the ceiling washed with pearl gray.

feta and fine white lace curtains are hung thin ones of pale pink gauze. The low dressing table, with its triple mirror and its plate glass top, the twin beds and candlestick, the chiffonier and tall shaving bureau are gray enameled wood. This enamel is several shades darker than the walls, and the beds have the fine cane work inset that is so much used now with wooden furniture and which gives such distinction to it. There is also in the room a chaise lounge covered with rose flowered chintz on a pale gray ground.

The tones of this beautiful material bring together in perfect harmony the curtaining and the walls; an easy chair is covered with the chintz, also a stool for the dressing table. This flowered stuff, with its cushions and valances, lifts the room from stiff conventionalism into a comfort and beauty which would otherwise be lacking. The illustration shows a corner in a charming living room. The Chippendale chair and original sketch of Charles Dickens are prized possessions of the owner that lift the room of which they are a part far from the conventional.

A Human Machine.

"Do you give any credence to the claims of some radicals that man is becoming little more than a human machine?" asked the friend.

"Yes. At times I feel that I am becoming simply a lawn mower," answered the suburbanite.—Buffalo Express.

GRACE METHODIST CHURCH

J. P. Wilson, B. A., Pastor.
Sunday November 2nd.

Union Fellowship of Grace and Trinity congregations at 9.30 a.m., led by Rev. Mr. Seiley.

Union Service at 10.30, Rev. H. T. Crosley, Evangelist, will preach and address the Sunday School.

No lecture in Grace Church in the evening, but a Union Service in Trinity Church.

All welcome.

Mr. Taylor Spencer, Bardolph, has sold his house in South Napanee to Mr. Geo. Hartman.

The site is now ready for the drill hall but there seems to be some delay in awarding the contract for the hall.

Rev. Mr. Wilson preaches both morning and evening at the church re-opening at Tamworth, on Sunday.

On Monday evening, Oct. 27th, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sager held a birthday party in honor of their infant daughter, Elsie May, who was one year old. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Bert Leaf, Deseronto ; Mr. Morley Pearson and Miss Sadie McConnell, of Deseronto ; Mr. Thomas and Miss Grace Pearson, of Napanee. They all had an enjoyable time and played games. The baby was given a purse of money.

Mr. Nelson Woodcock, a former resident of Hay Bay, passed away on Saturday last at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. G. Dixey, Stoneham, Mass. Mr. Woodcock ran the Hay Bay ferry, known as Woodcock's ferry, for a long number of years and was well-known and highly respected. A few years ago he retired from the business on account of failing health and has been living with his daughter at Stoneham. Two sons of deceased live in Boston. The immediate cause of his death was a paralytic stroke. The remains were brought to Napanee and taken to Bethany church for interment.

The Clare Amusement Company appeared at the Opera House Tuesday and Wednesday night, presenting the well-known pastoral comedy, "The Parish Priest." Arthur Clare as Father Whelan, Alice Hazen as Nellie, Gilbert Coan as Dr. Welsh, John J. Curry as the Servant Michael were well received. But no prettier scene could be imagined than that when Miss Gladys tripped upon the stage as Kate Corrigan, and Mr. and Mrs. Brown as Jim and Miss Cassidy made a splendid addition. This company remains in this town indefinitely playing here and in nearby towns. The popular verdict is "better than The Rosary," a successful play that has been here.

Rev. T. C. Buchanan, one of the Superintendents of Missions of the Methodist Church for Western Canada will be on the Napanee District in the interests of the Forward Movement work, and especially in the interests of the work of Mr. J. K.

Rev. T. C. Buchanan, one of the Superintendents of Missions of the Methodist Church for Western Canada will be on the Napanee District in the interests of the Forward Movement work, and especially in the interests of the work of Mr. J. K.
Smith, missionary to the Galicians at Pakam, Alberta. He will address meetings on Sunday evening at Odessa, Monday afternoon and evening at Enterprise, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Roblin, Thursday afternoon and evening at Selby. Arrangements are being made for him to address meetings at other places as his time will permit. This is the first time that Mr. Buchanan has been in this district and it is a great opportunity for hearing at first hand of the missionary work being done in West-

The Late L. A. Aylesworth.

Lester Allen Aylesworth passed away on October 21st, at the manse, Colborne, the home of his daughter,
in the sixty-ninth year of his age.
The deceased had suffered from heart trouble for a number of years, but his death came unexpectedly at the last.
He was born in the county of Lennox, where he resided on his farm, on the shores of the Bay of Quinte, until a year ago, when he retired on account of poor health. He was of U. E. Loyalist stock. Mr. Aylesworth was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church, and highly respected member of the Masonic Order, and also of the
A. O. U. W. and Chosen Friends lodges. A short service was held at the manse, when Rev. J. Knox, Rev.
A. A. Foster, Rev. T. C. O'Connor
Fenton and Rev. Mr. Pearce took part. The remains were taken to Bar for interment, where the brother Masons of Maple Leaf lodge, A. F. and A. M. took charge of the funeral.
The Rev. T. J. Glover, of Toronto, conducted the service. A widow and one daughter, Mrs. Malcolm Lindsay, are left to mourn his loss.
